

UC-NRLF

$B 272 857

GREAT POEMS OF THE WORLD WAR

Edited By

W. D. EATON

EX LIBRIS

918
E14
2

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

GREAT POEMS OF THE WORLD WAR

Between the hedges of the centuries
A thousand phantom armies go and come,
While Reason whispers as each marches past,
"This is the last of wars—this is the last!"

—Lieut. Gilbert Waterhouse.

GREAT POEMS OF THE WORLD WAR

EDITED, WITH INTRODUCTION, NOTES AND ORIGINAL MATTER, BY

W. D. EATON

CHICAGO
T. S. DENISON & COMPANY
PUBLISHERS

COPYRIGHT, 1918

By

EBEN H. NORRIS

under title

"The War in Verse and Prose"

Copyright, 1922, by T. S. Denison & Company

"Great Poems of the World War"

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

PREFACE

IN a fateful day in 1914, without a warning flash or tremor, there fell upon the world such a blast of war as human reason could not have foreglimpsed, nor Apocalyptic vision raised, to appall the souls of men. Twenty-seven nations took the shock and were rocked to their foundations. Eleven were caught and knotted in the maddest agony of conflict that ever was known. Through four years the winds of destruction swirled and roared around the monstrous welter, before the evil forces failed and their exhaustion brought a breathing space such as lies at the heart of a typhoon. Around the widening edges of that space they still muttered for a while in gusts of blood and fire, slowly receding, slowly dying. But the great storm is gone; the long night that seemed the night of doom is over.

Its epic has not been written. The time is too near us, the motive too deep, the theme too vast. But out of the dark came many voices, voices of lamentation, of home and love and hope and heroism and loftiest ideality, of romance, of strange comedy. These had their inspiration from a gigantic spectacle of elemental passions in cross-play, from the thoughts and emotions not of a single people, but of all that were fighting for the life and light of civilization. Poets great and poets minor followed the war or fought in it, and expressed its spirit with a personal, passionate fidelity impossible to historians.

It would not be well were all these voices lost. Many are worth fixation where they may be heard again at will, and that is the reason for and purpose of this book. The finest and truest of them are given here.

In making selection, availability for recitation has been considered. There is no better way to stir the mind or fix the memory than by spoken words of beauty in rhythmic cadence, especially in schools. It is hoped they will be effective in such uses.

Readers will find in the captain notes many helpful sidelights upon topics and personalities. These will commend themselves for their own sake.

W. D. EATON.

The Press Club, Chicago.

CONTENTS

Asia ABRAHAM LINCOLN WALKS AT MIDNIGHT ACELDAMA AFTERWARD ALAN SEEGER AMBULANCE DRIVER'S PRAYER, AN AMERICAN CREED, AN ANXIOUS ANTHEMIST, THE ANXIOUS DEAD, THE APRIL SONG, AN ARMED LINER, THE "AS SHE IS SPOKE" AS THE TRUCKS GO ROLLIN' BY AUSTRALIA'S MEN	Vachel Lindsay 144 Dr. George F. Butler 117 Charles Hanson Towne 133 Washington Van Dusen 14 Chaplain Thomas F. Coakley 74 Everard Jack Appleton 57 Guy Forrester Lee 169 Lieut. Col. John McCrae 109 George C. Michael 189 H. Smalley Sarson 183 Lieut. L. W. Suckert 26 Dorothea Mackellar 96
BATTLE LINE, THE BATTLE OF BELLEAU WOOD BEFORE ACTION BLIGHTY BLUE AND THE GRAY IN FRANCE BOY NEXT DOOR, THE BRITISH ARMY OF 1914, THE BULLINGTON BUT A SHORT TIME TO LIVE	J. B. Dollard 65 Edgar A. Guest 29 Lieut. William Noel Hodgson 13 Lieut. Siegfried Sassoon, M. C. 121 George M. Mayo 41 S. E. Kiser 172 Alfred W. Pollard 119 C. Fox Smith 34 Sergt. Leslie Coulson 103
CALL, THE CHANT OF ARMY COOKS, A CHRIST IN FLANDERS CLERK, THE COLUMBIA'S PRAYER	Robert W. Service 106 . 66 L. W. 55 B. H. M. Hetherington 94 Thomas P. Bashaw 82

CONTENTS—Continued

CORP'RAL'S CHEVRONS		37
CRIMSON CROSS, THE	Elizabeth Brown Du Bridge	48
CROSS AND THE FLAG, THE	William Henry, Car- dinal O'Connell	45
CROWN, THE	Helen Combes	193
CRUTCHES' TUNE, THE	Elizabeth R. Stoner	108
DESTROYERS	"Klaxon"	84
DIRGE, A	Victor Perowne	90
DO YOUR ALL	Edgar A. Guest	152
DRUM, THE	Joseph Lee	67
EASTER-EGGS	Reginald Wright Kauff- man	89
EDITH CAVELL	McLanburgh Wilson	178
EPITAPH FOR THE UNKNOWN SOL- DIER	Annette Kohn	202
EVENING STAR, THE	Harold Seton	81
FLAG EVERLASTING	A. G. Riddoch	40
FLAG OF THE FREE	Francis T. Smith	153
FLAG SPEAKS, THE	Walter E. Peck	105
FLAG, THE	Edward A. Horton	173
FLEMISH VILLAGE, A	H. A.	92
FRANCE	Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson	93
FRENCH IN THE TRENCHES	William J. Robinson	19
GENTLEMEN OF OXFORD, THE	Norah M. Holland	115
GOING WEST	Eleanor Jewett	123
GOLDENROD, THE	"Anchusa"	129
GOLD STAR, THE	Edgar A. Guest	17
GRAVES OF GALLIPOLI, THE	L. L. (A. N. Z. A. C.)	27
GREAT ADVENTURE, THE	Major Kendall Ban- ning	68
"HEARTS ARE TOUCHING"		159
HERE AT VERDUN	Chester M. Wright	167
HOME	Reginald Wright Kauff- man	110

CONTENTS—Continued

HOMEcoming, THE	Leroy Folge	192
HYMN OF FREEDOM, A	Mary Perry King	98
I HAVE A RENDEZVOUS WITH
DEATH	Alan Seeger	99
IN FLANDERS' FIELDS	Lieut. Col. John McCrae	101
IN THE FRONT-LINE DESKS	Lieut. Elmer Franklin Powell	143
JEAN DESPREZ	Robert W. Service	146
JOHN DOE—BUCK PRIVATE	Allan P. Thomson	127
JUST THINKING	Hudson Hawley	80
KID HAS GONE TO THE COLORS	William Herschell	23
KINGS, THE	Hugh J. Hughes	145
KNITTING SOCKS	128
LET THERE BE LIGHT!	Ruth Wright Kauff- man	196
LITANY *	Allene Gregory	20
LITTLE GRIMY-FINGERED GIRL, A	Lee Wilson Dodd	43
LITTLE HOME PAPER, THE	Charles Hanson Towne	15
LITTLE TOWN IN SENEGAL, A	Will Thompson	42
LONELY GARDEN, THE	Edgar A. Guest	118
LOST ONES, THE	Francis Ledwidge	104
MAGPIES IN PICARDY	"Tipuca"	130
MAN BEHIND, THE	Douglas Malloch	166
MARCHING SOLOQUY, A	71
MARINES, THE	Adolphe E. Smylie	73
MEN OF THE BLOOD AND MIRE	Daniel M. Henderson	160
MIKE DILLON, DOUGHBOY	Lieut. John Pierre Roche	61
MISSING	"Iris"	78
MORITURI TE SALUTANT	P. H. B. L.	120
MULES	C. Fox Smith	187
NAZARETH	"L."	47
NIGHTINGALES OF FLANDERS, THE	Grace Hazard Conkling	50

CONTENTS—Continued

NINETEEN-SEVENTEEN	Susan Hooker Whitman	85
NO MAN'S LAND	Capt. James H. Knight-Adkin	16
NOT TOO OLD TO FIGHT	T. C. Harbaugh	75
NOT WITH VAIN TEARS	Lieut. Rupert Brooke	102
NOVEMBER ELEVENTH	Elizabeth Hanly	198
NURSE, THE		14
OLD GANG ON THE CORNER, THE	William Herschell	64
OLD JIM	Norman Shannon Hall	199
OLD TOP SERGEANT, THE	Berton Braley	38
ON HIS OWN	Adolphe E. Smylie	124
OUR SOLDIER DEAD	Annette Kohn	195
PADRE, THE	Capt. C. W. Blackall	36
PARENTHETICALLY SPEAKING		176
PASSING THE BUCK	Sergt. Norman E. Nygaard	32
PERSHING AT THE TOMB OF LAFAYETTE	Amelia Josephine Burr	52
PIERROT GOES	Charlotte Becker	49
POILU	Steuart M. Emery	95
"POOR OLD SHIP!"	C. Fox Smith	30
POPPIES	Capt. John Mills Han-son	25
PRESENT BATTLEFIELD, THE	Wright Field	197
RAGNAROK	Arthur Guiterman	21
RAIN ON YOUR OLD TIN HAT	Lieut. J. H. Wickersham	182
REFUGEES, THE	W. G. S.	162
RETINUE, THE	Katharine Lee Bates	137
RETURN, THE	Theodore Howard Banks, Jr.	33
RIDE IN FRANCE, A	"O. C. Platoon"	170
RIVERS OF FRANCE, THE	H. J. M.	79
ROAD TO FRANCE, THE	Daniel M. Henderson	46
RUNNER MCGEE	Edgar A. Guest	57
SCRAP OF PAPER, A	Herbert Kaufman	24
SERBIAN EPITAPH, A	V. Stanimirovic	50

CONTENTS—Continued

SERVICE FLAG, THE	J. E. Evans	158
SERVICE FLAG, THE	William Herschell	154
SHIPS THAT SAIL IN THE NIGHT	Dysart McMullen	126
SILENT ARMY, THE	Ian Adanac	86
SMALL TOWN SPORT, A	Damon Runyon	155
SOLDIER'S FOLKS AT HOME, THE		59
SOLDIERS OF THE SOIL	Everard Jack Appleton	44
SOLDIER, THE	Lieut. Rupert Brooke	102
SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE	Le Roy C. Henderson	157
SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, 1918	Almon Hensley	132
SONG OF THE AIR, THE	Gordon Alchin	190
SONG OF THE DEAD, THE	J. H. M. Abbott	161
SONG OF THE GUNS, THE	Herbert Kaufman	134
SONG OF THE WINDS	Mary Lanier Magruder	163
SOURCE OF NEWS, THE		86
SPIRES OF OXFORD, THE	Winifred M. Letts	114
SPRING	F. M. H. D.	123
SUDDENLY ONE DAY		151
SWAN SONGS		99
TANKS	O. C. A. Child	97
TELLING THE BEES	G. E. R.	136
THERE ARE CROCUSES AT NOTTINGHAM		184
THERE WILL BE DREAMS AGAIN	Mabel Hillyer Eastman	171
THEY SHALL NOT PASS	Alison Brown	125
THEY SHALL RETURN	J. Lewis Milligan	179
THREE HILLS	Everard Owen	60
TO HAPPIER DAYS	Mabel McElliott	111
TO MY SON		87
TO SERVE IS TO GAIN	Charles H. Mackintosh	179
TO SOMEBODY	Harold Seton	69
"TO THE IRISH DEAD"	Essex Evans	180
TO THE WRITER OF "CHRIST IN FLANDERS"	E. M. V.	69
TRAINS	Lieut. John Pierre Roche	53
TWO VIEWPOINTS	Amelia Josephine Burr	83
UNKNOWN SOLDIER ` ARMISTICE DAY AT ARLINGTON, THE	Grantland Rice	200

CONTENTS—Continued

VICTORY!	S. J. Duncan-Clark	191
VISION	Dorothy Paul	181
VIVE LA FRANCE!	Charlotte Holmes Crawford	139
WAR	Col. William Lightfoot Visscher	70
WAR HORSE, THE	Lieut. L. Fleming	174
WAR ROSARY, THE	Nellie Hurst	185
WATCHIN' OUT FOR SUBS	U. A. L.	18
WAYSIDE IN FRANCE, A	Adolphe E. Smylie	76
WE'RE MARCHIN' WITH THE COUNTRY	Frank L. Stanton	151
"WHAT THINK YE?"	W. A. Briscoe	165
WHEN PRIVATE MUGRUMS PAR- LEY VOOS	Pvt. Charles Divine	186
WHEN THE FRENCH BAND PLAYS		63
WHILE SUMMERS PASS	Aline Michaelis	72
WIDOW, THE	Miss C. M. Mitchell	51
WITH THE SAME PRIDE	Theodosia Garrison	116
WOES OF A ROOKIE, THE	William L. Colestock	141
WOMAN'S GAME, THE		91
WORLD SERIES OPENED—BATTER UP!		177
YOUR LAD, AND MY LAD	Randall Parrish	112

GREAT POEMS OF THE WORLD WAR

BEFORE ACTION

LIEUT. WILLIAM NOEL HODGSON
MILITARY CROSS, DEVON REGIMENT—KILLED IN BATTLE

From "Verse and Prose in Peace and War." John Murray, Publisher, London. Permission to reproduce in this book.

BY all the glories of the day,
And the cool evening's benison;
By the last sunset touch that lay
Upon the hills when day was done:
By beauty lavishly outpoured,
And blessings carelessly received,
By all the days that I have lived,
Make me a soldier, Lord.

By all of human hopes and fears,
By all the wonders poets sing,
The laughter of unclouded years,
And every sad and lovely thing:
By the romantic ages stored
With high endeavor that was his,
By all his mad catastrophes,
Make me a man, O Lord.

I, that on my familiar hill
Saw with uncomprehending eyes
A hundred of Thy sunsets spill
Their fresh and sanguine sacrifice,
Ere the sun swings his noonday sword
Must say good-bye to all of this:
By all delights that I shall miss,
Help me to die, O Lord.

ALAN SEEGER

WASHINGTON VAN DUSEN
IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

NO beauty could escape his loving eyes,
Not even ruthless war could hide from view
The smiling fields where crimson poppies grew,
Nor mar the sunset's rose and purple dyes;
He watched a vine-clad slope, with glad surprise
To hear grapepickers sing, although they knew
Just on the other side, the cannon threw
Their deadly shells and woke the startled skies.

But over all that made Champagne so fair,
He saw the grandeur of the field of strife,
Exulting in the cause that placed him there,
He felt a calm, mid all the carnage rife,
And faced the battle with a spirit rare,
"For death may be more wonderful than life."

THE NURSE

IN LONDON PUNCH

Reproduced by special permission of the Proprietors of "Punch"

HERE in the long white ward I stand,
Pausing a little breathless space,
Touching a restless fevered hand,
Murmuring comforts commonplace—

Long enough pause to feel the cold
Fingers of fear about my heart;
Just for a moment, uncontrolled,
All the pent tears of pity start.

While here I strive, as best I may,
Strangers' long hours of pain to ease,
Dumbly I question—Far away
Lies my beloved even as these?

THE LITTLE HOME PAPER

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

IN THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

THE little home paper comes to me,
 As badly printed as it can be;
 It's ungrammatical, cheap, absurd—
 Yet, how I love each intimate word!
 For here am I in the teeming town,
 Where the sad, mad people rush up and down,
 And it's good to get back to the old lost place,
 And gossip and smile for a little space.

The weather is hot; the corn crop's good;
 They've had a picnic in Sheldon's Wood.
 And Aunt Maria was sick last week;
 Ike Morrison's got a swollen cheek,
 And the Squire was hurt in a runaway—
 More shocked than bruised, I'm glad they say.
 Bert Wills—I used to play with him—
 Is working a farm with his Uncle Jim.

The Red Cross ladies gave a tea,
 And raised quite a bit. Old Sol MacPhee
 Has sold his house on Lincoln Road—
 He couldn't carry so big a load.
 The methodist minister's had a call
 From a wealthy parish near St. Paul.
 And old Herb Sweet is married at last—
 He was forty-two. How the years rush past!

But here's an item that makes me see
 What a puzzling riddle life can be.
 "Ed Stokes," it reads, "was killed in France
 When the Allies made their last advance."

Ed Stokes! That boy with the laughing eyes
 As blue as the early-summer skies!
 He wouldn't have killed a fly—and yet,
 Without a murmur, without a regret,

He left the peace of our little place,
 And went away with a light in his face;
 For out in the world was a job to do,
 And he wouldn't come home until it was through!
 Four thousand miles from our tiny town
 And its hardware store, this boy went down.
 Such a quiet lad, such a simple chap—
 But he's put East Dunkirk on the map!

NO MAN'S LAND

CAPT. JAMES H. KNIGHT-ADKIN
 IN THE SPECTATOR

NO Man's Land is an eerie sight
 At early dawn in the pale gray light.
 Never a house and never a hedge
 In No Man's Land from edge to edge,
 And never a living soul walks there
 To taste the fresh of the morning air.
 Only some lumps of rotting clay,
 That were friends or foemen yesterday.

What are the bounds of No Man's Land?
 You can see them clearly on either hand,
 A mound of rag-bags gray in the sun,
 Or a furrow of brown where the earthworks run
 From the Eastern hills to the Western sea,
 Through field or forest, o'er river and lea;
 No man may pass them, but aim you well
 And Death rides across on the bullet or shell.

But No Man's Land is a goblin sight
 When patrols crawl over at dead o' night;
 Boche or British, Belgian or French,
 You dice with death when you cross the trench.
 When the "rapid," like fire-flies in the dark,
 Flits down the parapet spark by spark,
 And you drop for cover to keep your head
 With your face on the breast of the four months' dead.

The man who ranges in No Man's Land
 Is dogged by the shadows on either hand
 When the star-shell's flare, as it bursts o'erhead,
 Scares the great gray rats that feed on the dead,
 And the bursting bomb or the bayonet-snatch
 May answer the click of your safety-catch.
 For the lone patrol, with his life in his hand,
 Is hunting for blood in No Man's Land.

THE GOLD STAR

EDGAR A. GUEST

Copyright, 1918, by Edgar A. Guest. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

THE star upon their service flag has changed to gleaming gold;
 It speaks no more of hope and life, as once it did of old,
 But splendidly it glistens now for every eye to see
 And softly whispers: "Here lived one who died for liberty.

"Here once he walked and played and laughed, here oft his smile was known;
 Within these walls today are kept the toys he used to own.
 Now I am he who marched away and I am he who fell;
 Of service once I spoke, but now of sacrifice I tell.

"No richer home in all this land is there than this I grace,
 For here was cradled manhood fine; within this humble place

A soldier for the truth was born, and here, beside the door,

A mother sits and grieves for him who shall return no more.

"Salute me, stranger, as you pass! I mark a soldier who Gave up the joys of living here, to dare and die for you!
 This is the home that once he knew, who fought for you and fell;

This is a shrine of sacrifice, where faith and courage dwell."

WATCHIN' OUT FOR SUBS

U. A. L.

From Bert Leston Taylor's column, "A Line o' Type or Two,"
 IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

BOSUN'S whistle piping, "Starboard watch is on"
 Sleepy army officer, waked at crack o' dawn;
 In the forward crow's nest, watchin' out for subs;
 If they show a peeper, shoot the bloomin' tubs.

Ocean black and shiny, silly little moon;
 Transports fore and aft of us—daylight comin' soon;
 Sleeping troopers sprawling on the deck below;
 Something in the water makes the spindrift glow.

In the forward crow's nest—ah! the day is here!
 Transports and destroyers looming far and near.
 Ours the great adventure—gone is old romance!
 Wake, ye new Crusaders! Look!—the shores of France!

FRENCH IN THE TRENCHES

WILLIAM J. ROBINSON

IN THE SAN FRANCISCO ARGONAUT

Permission to reproduce in this book

I HAVE a conversation book; I brought it out from home.

It tells you the French for knife and fork and likewise brush and comb;

It learns you how to ask the time, the names of all the stars,

And how to order oysters and how to buy cigars.

But there ain't no stores to buy in; there ain't no big hotels,

When you spend your time in dugouts doing a wholesale trade in shells;

It's nice to know the proper talk for theatres and such, But when it comes to talking, why, it doesn't help you much.

There's all them friendly kind o' things you'd naturally say

When you meet a feller casual like and pass the time o' day.

Them little things that breaks the ice and kind of clears the air.

But when you use your French book, why, them things isn't there.

I met a chap the other day a-rootin' in a trench, He didn't know a word of ours, nor me a word of French; And how we ever managed, well, I cannot understand, But I never used my French book though I had it in my hand.

I winked at him to start with; he grinned from ear to ear; An' he says, "Bong jour, Sammy," an' I says "Souvenir"; He took my only cigarette, I took his thin cigar,

Which set the ball a-rollin', and so—well, there you are!
 I showed him next my wife and kids; he up and showed me his,
 Them funny little French kids with hair all in a frizz;
 "Annette," he says, "Louise," he says, and his tears begin to fall;
 We was comrades when we parted, though we'd hardly spoke at all.

He'd have kissed me if I'd let him. We had never met before,
 And I've never seen the beggar since, for that's the way
 of war;
 And though we scarcely spoke a word, I wonder just the same
 If he'll ever see them kids of his—I never asked his name.

LITANY

ALLENE GREGORY

IN HARRIET MONROE'S POETRY MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

SAINT GENEVIEVE, whose sleepless watch
 Saved threatened France of old,
 Above the ship that carries him
 Your sacred vigil hold.

Where all the fair green fields you loved
 Are scarred with bursting shell,
 Joan, the Maid who fought for France—
 Oh, guard your young knight well.

But if by sea or if by land
 God set death in his way—
 Then, Mother of the Sacrificed,
 Teach me what prayer to pray!

RAGNAROK

THE TWILIGHT OF THE GODS

ARTHUR GUITERMAN

IN THE BELLMAN, MINNEAPOLIS

Permission to reproduce in this book

HO! Heimdal sounds the Gjallar-horn:
 The hosts of Hel rush forth
 And Fenris rages redly
 From his shackles in the North;
 Unleashed is Garm, and Lok is loosed,
 And freed is Giant Rime;
 The Rainbow-bridge is broken
 By the hordes of Muspelheim.
 The wild Valkyries ride the wind
 With spear and clanging shield
 Where all the Hates embattled
 Are met on Vigrid-field;
 For there shall fall the Mighty Ones
 By valiant men adored—
 Great Odin, Tyr the fearless,
 And Frey that sold his sword.
 And Thor shall slay the dragon
 Whose breath shall be his bane.
 The gods themselves shall perish;
 The sons of the gods shall reign!

Old Time shall sound the boding horn
 Again and yet again,
 To rouse the warring passions
 That swell the hearts of men.
 Revolt shall wake, and Anarchy,
 With all their horrid throng—
 Revenge, Destruction, Rapine,

The spawn of ancient Wrong,
 With all the hosts of slaughter
 That our own sins must breed—
 Cold Hate, Oppression's daughter,
 And Rage, the child of Greed.
 Then, though we stand to battle
 As men have ever stood,
 Down, down shall crash our temples,
 The Evil and the Good;
 Yea, all that now we cherish
 Must pass—but not in vain.
 The gods we love shall perish;
 The sons of the gods shall reign!

So, strong in faith, or weak in doubt,
 Or berserk-mad, we range
 Our spears in that long battle
 Which means not Death, but Change.
 Our highest with our lowest
 Must own the grim behest,
 And Good shall yield for Better—
 Else how should come the Best?
 Yet if we win our portion
 How dare we crave the whole?
 And if we still press forward,
 Why need we know the goal?
 But those whose hearts are constant
 And those whose souls are wise
 Have said that from our ashes
 A nobler race shall rise
 From shreds of shattered altars
 To rear the Perfect Fane.
 Our little gods must perish
 That God Himself shall reign!

THE KID HAS GONE TO THE COLORS

WILLIAM HERSCHELL
IN THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

Permission to reproduce in this book

THE Kid has gone to the Colors
And we don't know what to say;
The Kid we have loved and cuddled
Stepped out for the Flag today.
We thought him a child, a baby,
With never a care at all,
But his country called him man-size
And the Kid has heard the call.

He paused to watch the recruiting
Where, fired by the fife and drum,
He bowed his head to Old Glory
And thought that it whispered: "Come!"
The Kid, not being a slacker,
Stood forth with patriot-joy
To add his name to the roster—
And God, we're proud of the boy!

The Kid has gone to the Colors;
It seems but a little while
Since he drilled a schoolboy army
In a truly martial style.
But now he's a man, a soldier,
And we lend him listening ear,
For his heart is a heart all loyal,
Unscourged by the curse of fear.

His dad, when he told him, shuddered,
His mother—God bless her!—cried;
Yet, blest with a mother-nature,

She wept with a mother-pride,
 But he whose old shoulders straightened
 Was Granddad—for memory ran
 To years when he, too, a youngster,
 Was changed by the Flag to a man!

A SCRAP OF PAPER

HERBERT KAUFMAN

From Mr. Kaufman's book of poems, "The Hell-Gate of Soissons."
 T. Fisher Unwin, Publishers (all rights reserved), London, England.
 Special permission to reproduce in this book.

"Just for a word, 'neutrality' . . . just for a scrap of paper, Great Britain was going to make war."—The German Chancellor to the British Ambassador in Berlin.

JUST for a "scrap of paper,"
 Just for a Nation's word,
 Just for a clean tradition,
 Just for a treaty slurred;
 Just for a pledge defaulted,
 Just for a dastard blow,
 Just for an ally's summons,
 Just for a friend struck low;
 Just for the weal of progress,
 Just for a trust held dear,
 Just for the rights of mankind,
 Just for a duty clear;
 Just for a Prussian insult,
 Just for a splendid cause,
 Just for the hope of progress,
 Just for the might of laws;
 Just for the kingdom's peril,
 Just for a deed of shame,
 Just for defense of honor,
 Just for the British name!

POPPIES

CAPT. JOHN MILLS HANSON, F.A.
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

POPPIES in the wheat fields on the pleasant hills of France,
Reddening in the summer breeze that bids them nod and dance;
Over them the skylark sings his lilting, liquid tune—
Poppies in the wheat fields, and all the world in June.

Poppies in the wheat fields on the road to Monthiers—
Hark, the spiteful rattle where the masked machine guns play!
Over them the shrapnel's song greets the summer morn—
Poppies in the wheat fields—but, ah, the fields are torn.

See the stalwart Yankee lads, never ones to blench,
Poppies in their helmets as they clear the shallow trench,
Leaping down the furrows with eager, boyish tread
Through the popped wheat fields to the flaming woods ahead.

Poppies in the wheat fields as sinks the summer sun,
Broken, bruised and trampled—but the bitter day is won;
Yonder in the woodland where the flashing rifles shine,
With their poppies in their helmets, the front files hold the line.

Poppies in the wheat fields; how still beside them lie Scattered forms that stir not when the star shells burst on high;
Gently bending o'er them beneath the moon's soft glance,
Poppies of the wheat fields on the ransomed hills of France.

AS THE TRUCKS GO ROLLIN' BY

LIEUT. L. W. SUCKERT, A.S., U.S.A.
 IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

THERE'S a rumble an' a jumble an' a humpin' an' a thud,

As I wakens from my restless sleep here in my bed
 o' mud,

'N' I pull my blankets tighter underneath my shelter fly,
 An' I listen to the thunder o' the trucks a-rollin' by.

They're jumpin' and they're humpin' through the inky gloom o' night,

'N' I wonder how them drivers see without a glim o' light;
 I c'n hear the clutches roarin' as they throw the gears in high,

And the radiators boilin' as the trucks go rollin' by.

There's some a-draggin' cannons, you c'n spot the sound
 all right;

The rumblin' ones is heavies, an' the rattly ones is light;
 The clinkin' shells is pointin' up their noses at the sky;
 Oh, you c'n tell what's passin' as the trucks go rollin' by.

But most of 'em is packin' loads o' human Yankee freight
 That'll slam the ol' soft pedal ontuh Heinie's Hymn o'
 Hate;

You c'n hear 'em singin' "Dixie," and the "Sweet Bye
 'n' Bye,"

'N' "Where Do We Go From Here, Boys?" as the trucks go rollin' by.

Some's singin' songs as, when I left, they wasn't even ripe,

(A-showin' 'at they's rookies wot ain't got a service stripe);

But jus' the same they're good ol' Yanks, and that's the reason why

I likes the jazz 'n' barber shop o' the trucks a-rollin' by.

Jus' God and Gen'ral Pershing knows where these here
 birds'll light,
 Where them bumpin' trucks is bound for under camouflage o' night,
 When they can't take aero pitchers with their Fokkers in the sky
 Of our changes o' location by the trucks a-rollin' by.

So, altho' my bed is puddles an' I'm soaked through to the hide,
 My heart's out with them doughboys on their bouncin', singin' ride;
 They're bound for paths o' glory, or, p'raps, to fight 'n' die—
 God bless that Yankee cargo in the trucks a-rollin' by.

THE GRAVES OF GALLIPOLI

L. L. (A. N. Z. A. C.)

From "The Anzac Book." Cassell & Co., Ltd., Publishers, London.
 Special permission to reproduce in this book.

This poem is one of many that were written to commemorate the stubborn bravery of the Anzacs, the British soldiers from Australia and New Zealand. These indomitables came half way round the globe at Britain's first call. Their first appearance was in Egypt, where they drove the German-led Turks back into the desert and saved the Suez canal. They were and are officially designated the "Australian and New Zealand Army Corps," a title too long for common use. They have won fame and the world's admiration as the "Anzacs," a word made by running together the first letters of their official title. Australia's own name for her soldier is Bill-Jim. "The Graves of Gallipoli" is one of the most noble and tender poems that have come to us out of the war.

THE herdman wandering by the lonely rills
 Marks where they lie on the scarred mountain's flanks,
 Remembering that wild morning when the hills
 Shook to the roar of guns, and those wild ranks
 Surged upward from the sea.

None tends them. Flowers will come again in spring,
 And the torn hills and those poor mounds be green.
 Some bird that sings in English woods may sing
 To English lads beneath—the wind will keep Its ancient lullaby.

Some flower that blooms beside the southern foam
 May blossom where our dead Australians lie,
 And comfort them with whispers of their home;
 And they will dream, beneath the alien sky,
 Of the Pacific Sea.

“Thrice happy they who fell beneath the walls,
 Under their father’s eyes,” the Trojan said,
 “Not we who die in exile where who falls
 Must lie in foreign earth.” Alas! our dead
 Lie buried far away.

Yet where the brave man lies who fell in fight
 For his dear country, there his country is.
 And we will mourn them proudly as of right—
 For meaner deaths be weeping and loud cries:
 They died pro patria!

Oh, sweet and seemly so to die, indeed,
 In the high flush of youth and strength and pride.
 These are our martyrs, and their blood the seed
 Of nobler futures. ’Twas for us they died.
 Keep we their memory green.

This be their epitaph. “Traveler, south or west,
 Go, say at home we heard the trumpet call,
 And answered. Now beside the sea we rest.
 Our end was happy if our country thrives:
 Much was demanded. Lo! our store was small—
 That which we had we gave—it was our lives.”

BATTLE OF BELLEAU WOOD

EDGAR A. GUEST

This poem was chosen by Major General John A. Lejeune, Commandant of the United States Marine Corps, as his favorite of all the Marine Corps verse written during the war. It is republished here by permission of the author and of the publishers, Reilly and Lee, who hold the copyright.

IT was thick with Prussian troopers, it was foul with German guns;
 Every tree that cast a shadow was a sheltering place for Huns.
 Death was guarding every roadway, death was watching every field,
 And behind each rise of terrain was a rapid-fire concealed;
 But Uncle Sam's Marines had orders: "Drive the Boche from where they're hid.
 For the honor of Old Glory, take the woods!" and so they did.

I fancy none will tell it as the story should be told—
 None will ever do full justice to those Yankee troopers bold.
 How they crawled upon their stomachs through the fields of golden wheat
 With the bullets spitting at them in that awful battle heat.
 It's a tale too big for writing; it's beyond the voice or pen,
 But it glows among the splendor of the bravest deeds of men.

It's recorded as a battle, but I fancy it will live,
 As the brightest gem of courage human struggles have to give.
 Inch by inch, they crawled to victory toward the flaming mounts of guns;
 Inch by inch, they crawled to grapple with the barricaded
 Huns;

On through fields that death was sweeping with a murderous fire, they went Till the Teuton line was vanquished and the German strength was spent.

Ebbled and flowed the tides of battle as they've seldom done before;

Slowly, surely, moved the Yankees against all the odds of war.

For the honor of the fallen, for the glory of the dead,
The living line of courage kept the faith and moved ahead.

They'd been ordered not to falter, and when night came on they stood

With Old Glory proudly flying o'er the trees of Belleau Wood.

"POOR OLD SHIP!"

C. FOX SMITH
IN PUNCH

Reproduced by special permission of the Proprietors of "Punch"

SHE wasn't much to brag about, she wasn't much to see,

A rusty, crusty hooker as a merchant ship could be;
They sunk her off the Longships light as night was coming on,

And we had to go and leave her there and, poor old ship, she's gone.

All that was good of her, all that was bad of her,
All that we gave to her, all that we had of her,
Poor old ship, she's gone!

The times we spent aboard her, they was oftener bad than good,

But bad or good, we'd live the lot all over if we could;

She's stood her trick as well as us, she's had her whack of fun,

She's shared it all with sailormen, and poor old ship, she's done.

Hard times and soft times and all times we've been with her,

Bad days and good days and all sorts we've seen with her,
And, poor old ship, she's done!

She's stuck her crazy derricks up by half a hundred quays,
She's dipped her dingy duster in the spray of all the seas;
Her funnels caked with Cape Horn ice and blistered in the sun,

She's moseyed round above a bit, and, poor old ship, she's done.

North seas and south, and they've all had a go at her,
Hot winds and cold, and they've all had a blow at her,
And, poor old ship, she's done!

She's trailed her smudge the whole world round in weather gray and blue,

She's churned a dozen oceans with her bloomin' nine-knot screw;

She's sampled all the harbor mud from Cardiff to Canton,
And she'll never clear another port, for, poor old ship, she's gone.

Ports up and down, and she's seen many a score of 'em;
Seas high and low, and she won't sail no more of 'em,
For, poor old ship, she's gone!

And chaps that knowed her in her time, 'tween London and Rangoon,

In many a sailor's drinking-place and water-front saloon,
Will set their drinks down when they hear her bloomin'
yarn is spun,

And say, "I sailed aboard her once, and, poor old ship, she's done.

Many's the hard word I once used to spend on her,
Ah, them was the great days, and now there's an end on her,

Poor old ship, she's done!"

PASSING THE BUCK

SERGT. NORMAN E. NYGAARD, 313TH SN. TN.
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

THE Colonel has a job to do
That's really hard, and puzzling, too;
He can't quite figure what it needs,
So hands it out to Major Heeds.

And Major Heeds he thinks it o'er,
And thinks it o'er and o'er some more,
And he can't make it out at all,
So Captain Jones, he takes a fall.

The Captain shoves his helmet back,
And puts his brains all on the rack;
But "D—n" is all that can be said,
And then it's up to First Loot Head.

O' course, he "knows," but hasn't time—
The work they shove on him's a crime;
This, and then lots more to boot,
So on it goes to the Second Loot.

Now Lieutenant Young is just a kid,
A baby mouth by an eyebrow hid;
A job like that would knock him cold,
He hands it down to Top-soak Gold.

The Top-soak, 'course, is swamped with work;
It never was his plan to shirk,
But Sergeant Reed, he's just the man,
He'll sure do it if any can.

But that old sarge must sleep a lot:
 This biz of overworkin's rot;
 He gives the Corp'rul loads of gas,
 And so that duffer takes a pass.

But Corp'ruls don't know what to do,
 They're only built for bossing, too;
 So Corp'rul Jenks, he says he's stuck,
 And hands it on to a common buck.

And when the job is finished right,
 And all the things are clear as light,
 Why, then, it's found by all the Fates,
 The job was done by Private Bates.

An' it's passin' the buck,
 An' a-passin' the buck,
 An' a-passin' the buck along,
 An' on with the buck
 With the best o' luck,
 An' I hope you come out wrong.

THE RETURN

THEODORE HOWARD BANKS, JR.
 IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

WHEN I return, let us be very still;
 No mirth, and but one deep, soul-searching glance,
 Mindful of the unnumbered graves of France,
 Where love lies buried on each trampled hill.

BULLINGTON

C. FOX SMITH
IN PUNCH

Reproduced by special permission of the Proprietors of "Punch"

IT was the high midsummer, and the sun was shining strong,
And the lane was rather flinty, and the lane was rather long,
When—up and down the gentle hills beside the stripling
Test—
I chanced to come to Bullington and stayed a while to rest.

It was drowned in peace and quiet, as the river reeds are drowned
In the water clear as crystal, flowing by with scarce a sound,
And the air was like a posy with the sweet haymaking smells,
And the Roses and Sweet Williams and Canterbury Bells.

Far away as some strange planet seemed the old world's dust and din,
And the trout in sun-warmed shallows hardly seemed to stir a fin;
And there's never a clock to tell you how the hurrying world goes on
In the little ivied steeple down in drowsy Bullington.

Small and sleepy, there it nestled, seeming far from hastening Time,
As a teeny-tiny village in some quaint old nursery rhyme;
And a teeny-tiny river by a teeny-tiny weir
Sang a teeny-tiny ditty that I stayed a while to hear.

"Oh, the stream runs to the river, and the river to the sea,
 But the reedy banks of Bullington are good enough for me;
 Oh, the lane runs to the highway, and the highway o'er the down,
 But it's better here in Bullington than there in London
 town."

Then high above an aeroplane in humming flight went by,
 With the droning of its engines filling all the cloudless sky,
 And like the booming of a knell across that perfect day
 There came the gun's dull thunder from the ranges far away.

And while I lay and listened, oh, the river's sleepy tune Seemed to change its rippling music, like the cuckoo's stave in June;
 And the cannon's distant thunder, and the engines' warlike drone
 Seemed to mingle with its burthen in a solemn undertone.

"Oh, the stream runs to the river, and the river to the sea,
 And there's war on land and water, and there's work for you and me!
 And on many a field of glory there are gallant lives laid down
 As well for tiny Bullington as mighty London town!"

So I roused me from my daydream, for I knew the song spoke true
 That it isn't time for dreaming while there's duty still to do;
 And I turned into the highway where it meets the flinty
 lane,
 And the world of wars and sorrows was about me once again.

THE PADRE

CAPT. C. W. BLACKALL

'E's a sportsman is our Padre,
 Of that there ain't a doubt.
 'E don't chuck religion at yer,
 An' preach at yer an' spout;
 An' if 'e 'ears yer cussin',
 As yer fillin' up ther bags,
 'E jest ses, "Fumigate your throat,"
 An' 'ands yer out some fags.

'E don't take all fer granted
 That yer murderers an' thieves,
 An' always tell yer, now's ther time
 Fer turnin' over leaves.
 'E'll wander round ther trenches,
 Jest to pass ther time o' day.
 An' there ain't a bloke as doesn't feel
 A man 'as passed that way.

I remember once, near Wipers,
 When things was pretty 'ot,
 An' yer 'ad ter keep yer nut down
 If yer didn't want it shot;
 While they was fairly plasterin'
 As fast as they could load,
 'E came ridin'—mark yer, ridin'—
 All down ther Menin Road.

'E was dossin' in a "staminay," Pyjamas all complete,
 When a 'igh-explosive carried
 'Arf the 'ouse into the street.
 While other blokes was runnin' wild,
 An' kickin' up a row,
 'E calmly arsts, "Pray, what is the Correct procedure now?"

They tells 'im as 'e'd better
 Do a bunk for all 'e's worth,
 As 'is bloomin' "staminay" is not
 Ther safest spot on earth.
 But 'e 'as a look around 'im,
 An' wags 'is bally 'ead;
 Ses 'e, "It seems quite restful now,"
 An' back 'e goes to bed.

But 'e fairly put ther lid on
 When we made ther last attack:
 If 'is lads was goin' ter cop it,
 'E weren't fer 'angin' back.
 So 'e 'ops out of ther trenches
 Level with ther foremost 'ound,
 An' natural like 'e stops one
 An' gets a little wound.

'E's a sportsman is our Padre,
 Of that there ain't a doubt.
 'E don't chuck religion at yer,
 An' preach at yer an' spout.
 Still, 'e'll show ther way ter 'Eaven—
 That's if anybody can—
 But we'd follow 'im to 'ell; 'cos why?
 Our Padre 'e's a man.

CORP'RAL'S CHEVRONS

ANONYMOUS

IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

OH, the General with his epaulets, leadin' a parade;
 The Colonel and the Adjutant a-sportin' of their braid;
 The Major and the Skipper—none of 'em look so fine
 As a newly minted corp'ral, comin' down the line.

Oh, the Bishop in his miter pacin' up the aisle;
 The Governor, frock-coated, with a votes-for-women
 smile;
 The Congressman, the Mayor—aren't in it, I opine,
 With a newly minted corp'ral comin' down the line.

THE OLD 'TOP SERGEANT

BERTON BRALEY

From Mr. Braley's book, "In Camp and Trench," published and copyright, 1918, by George H. Doran Company, New York. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

"Shavetail" is a name applied by enlisted men in the regular army to lieutenants fresh from West Point.

TWENTY years of the army, of drawing a sergeant's pay
 And helping the West Point shavetails, fresh from the training school,
 To handle a bunch of soldiers and drill 'em the proper way (Which isn't always exactly according to book and rule).
 I've seen 'em rise to Captains and Majors and Colonels,
 too,
 And me still only a sergeant, the same as I used to be,
 And I knew that some of them didn't know as much as a sergeant knew,
 But I stuck to my daily duty—there wasn't a growl from me.

Twenty years of the army,
 Serving in peace and war,
 Standing the drill of the army mill,
 For that's what they paid me for.

'Ttwenty years with the army, which wasn't so much for size,
 But man for man I'd back it to lick any troops on earth.
 'Twas a proud little classy army, as good as the flag it flies,
 And it takes an old top sergeant to know what the flag is worth.
 Then—a shot at Sarejevo, and hell burst over there
 And the kaiser dragged us in it, and the bill for the draft was passed
 And—they handed me my commission, and some shoulder straps to wear,
 And the crazy dream of my rooky days had changed to a fact at last.

Twenty years with the army,
 And it's great to know they call
 On the guys like me for what will be
 The mightiest job of all.

Twenty years of the army, of doing what shavetails bid,
 And I know I haven't the polish that fellows like that will show,
 And I hold a high opinion of the brains of a West Point kid,
 But I think I can make him hustle when it comes to the work I know.
 But who cares where we come from, Plattsburg, ranks,
 or the Guard,
 This isn't a pink tea-party, but a War to be fought and won;
 There's a serious job before us, a job that is huge and hard,

And the social register don't count until we've got it done!

Twenty years in the army,
And now I've got my chance.
Have I earned my straps? Well, you watch the chaps
That I've trained for the game in France!

FLAG EVERLASTING

A. G. RIDDOCH

FLAG of our Faith: lead on—
Across the sand-blown plain,
The deep and trackless main,
When duty's trumpets blow,
Where frowns the freeman's foe,
And right crushed to the sod
Lifts soul to righteous God.
Flag of our Faith: lead on—

Flag of our Hope: lead on—
When stormy clouds hang low
And chilling north-winds blow
And days are long and drear.
When nights breed grief and fear;
A rainbow lights the sky
Whene'er its colors fly.
Flag of our Hope: lead on—

Flag of our Love: lead on—
In loyal hearts supreme,
Fairer than love's first dream,
Our first choice and our last,
Brightened by every blast.
Oh, emblem pure and sweet,

Thou can'st not know defeat.
Flag of our Love: lead on—

Flag of our Home: lead on—
Beneath thy folds we rest,
We live and love our best,
The fairest roses blow,
The richest harvests grow,
And care-free children play
And gladden every day.
Flag of our Home: lead on—

L'ENVOI—

Flag of our Faith, our Hope, our Love,
Flag of our Home, wave on above.
We'll live, we'll fight, we'll die for you—
Flag Everlasting, Red, White and Blue.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY IN FRANCE

GEORGE M. MAYO

HERE'S to the Blue of the wind-swept North,
When we meet on the fields of France;
May the spirit of Grant be with you all
As the sons of the North advance.

And here's to the Gray of the sun-kissed South,
When we meet on the fields of France;
May the spirit of Lee be with you all
As the sons of the South advance.

And here's to the Blue and the Gray as one,
When we meet on the fields of France;
May the spirit of God be with us all
As the sons of the Flag advance.

A LITTLE TOWN IN SENEGAL

WILL THOMPSON
IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

I HEAR the throbbing music down the lanes of Afric
rain:

The Afric spring is breaking, down in Senegal again.

O little town in Senegal, amid the clustered gums,
Where are your sturdy village lads, who one time danced to drums?

At Soissons, by a fountain wall, they sang their melodies;
And some now lie in Flemish fields, beside the northern seas;

And some tonight are camped and still, along the Marne and Aisne;

And some are dreaming of the palms that bend in Afric
rain.

The music of the barracks half awakes them from their dream;

They smile and sink back sleepily along the Flemish stream.

They dream the baobab's white buds have opened overnight;

They dream they see the solemn cranes that bask in morning light:

I hear the great drums beating in the square across the plain.

Where are the tillers of the soil, the gallant, loyal train?

O little town in Senegal, amid the white-bud trees,
At Soissons, in Picardy, went north the last of these!

A LITTLE GRIMY-FINGERED GIRL

LEE WILSON DODD
IN THE OUTLOOK

Permission to reproduce in this book

In sending his permission to use this sharp flash of the spirit of France, Mr. Dodd wrote: "It may interest you to know that the little grimy-fingered girl is real, and that I bought 'L'Intrans' from her every evening for many months during the dark days of last spring in Paris." The spring referred to being that of 1918, when the Germans were only a few miles from the city.

A LITTLE grimy-fingered girl
In stringy black and broken shoes
Stands where sharp human eddies whirl
And offers—news:
News from the front. "L'Intransigeant,
M'sieu, comme d'ordinaire?" Her smile
Is friendly though her face is gaunt;
There is no guile,
No mere mechanic flash of teeth,
No calculating leer of glance . . .
You wear your courage like a wreath,
Daughter of France.
Back of old sorrow in tired eyes
Back of endurance, through the night
That wearies you and makes you wise,
I see a light
Unshaken, proud, that does not pale,
—And you are nobody, my dear;
"Une vraie gamine," who does not quail,
Who knows not fear.
Rattle your sabers, Lords of Hate,
Ye shall not force them to their knees!
A street-girl scorns your God, your State—
The least of these. . . .

Place du Théâtre Français,
Paris, February, 1918.

SOLDIERS OF THE SOIL

EVERARD JACK APPLETON

By permission of Stewart & Kidd Company, Cincinnati, Publishers of "With the Colors," by Everard Jack Appleton. Copyright, 1917.

IT'S a high-falutin' title they have handed us;
 It's very complimentary and grand;
 But a year or so ago they called us "hicks," you know—
 An' joshed the farmer and his hired hand!

Now it's, "Save the country, Farmer!
 Be a soldier of the soil!
 Show your patriotism, pardner,
 By your never ending toil."
 So we're croppin' more than ever,
 An' we're speedin' up the farm.
 Oh, it's great to be a soldier—
 A sweatin' sun-burnt soldier,—
 A soldier in the furrows—
 Away from "war's alarm!"

While fightin' blight and blister,
 We hardly get a chance
 To read about our "comrades"
 A-doin' things in France.
 To raise the grub to feed 'em
 Is some job, believe me—plus!
 And I ain't so sure a soldier—
 A shootin', scrappin' soldier,
 That's livin' close to dyin'—
 Ain't got the best of us!

But we'll harrer and we'll harvest,
 An' we'll meet this new demand
 Like the farmers always meet it—

The farmers—and the land.
 An' we hope, when it is over
 An' this war has gone to seed,
 You will know us soldiers better—
 Th' sweatin', reapin' soldiers,
 Th' soldiers that have hustled
 To raise th' grub you need!

It's a mighty fine title you have given us,
 A name that sounds too fine to really stick;
 But maybe you'll forget (when you figure out your debt)
 To call th' man who works a farm a "hick."

THE CROSS AND THE FLAG
 WILLIAM HENRY, CARDINAL O'CONNELL
 IN THE CATHOLIC SCHOOL JOURNAL

HAIL, banner of our holy faith,
 Redemption's sacred sign,
 Sweet emblem thou of heavenly hope
 And of all help divine,
 We bare our heads in reverence
 As o'er us is unfurled
 The standard of the Cross of Christ
 Whose blood redeemed the world.

Hail, banner of our native land,
 Great ensign of the free,
 We love thy glorious Stars and Stripes,
 Emblem of liberty;
 Lift high the cross, unfurl the flag;
 May they forever stand
 United in our hearts and hopes,
 God and our native land.

THE ROAD TO FRANCE

DANIEL M. HENDERSON

Permission to reproduce in this book

The 1917 prize of the National Arts Club of New York was awarded to Mr. Henderson's poem. It was chosen out of more than four thousand that were submitted.

THANK God, our liberating lance
 Goes flaming on the way to France!
 To France—the trail the Gurkhas found;
 To France—old England's rallying-ground!
 To France—the path the Russians strode!
 To France—the Anzacs' glory road!
 To France—where our Lost Legion ran
 To fight and die for God and man!
 To France—with every race and breed
 That hates Oppression's brutal creed!

Ah, France, how could our hearts forget
 The path by which came Lafayette?
 How could the haze of doubt hang low
 Upon the road of Rochambeau?
 How was it that we missed the way
 Brave Joffre leads us along today?
 At last, thank God! At last, we see
 There is no tribal Liberty!
 No beacon lighting just our shores,
 No Freedom guarding but our doors.
 The flame she kindled for our sires
 Burns now in Europe's battle-fires.
 The soul that led our fathers west
 Turns back to free the world's opprest.

Allies, you have not called in vain;
 We share your conflict and your pain.
 "Old Glory," through new stains and rents,
 Partakes of Freedom's sacraments.

Into that hell his will creates
 We drive the foe—his lusts, his hates.
 Last come, we will be last to stay,
 Till Right has had her crowning day.
 Replenish, comrades, from our veins
 The blood the sword of despot drains,
 And make our eager sacrifice
 Part of the freely rendered price
 You pay to lift humanity—
 You pay to make our brothers free.
 See, with what proud hearts we advance
 To France!

NAZARETH

"L"

IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

On the capture of the city by the British under General Allenby,
 September 21, 1918.

ACROSS the sands by Mary's well
 Along the shores of Galilee,
 The paths are pitted deep with shell
 And drab with marching infantry.

Perhaps upon the self-same spot
 Where He first lifted up His head,
 In cellar straw and manger cot,
 Now Freedom's hosts are billeted.

Then 'twas a life—now myriad death.
 The Allied troops win Nazareth.

THE CRIMSON CROSS

ELIZABETH BROWN DU BRIDGE
IN THE DAILY NEWS, SAULT STE. MARIE

OUTSIDE the ancient city's gate
Upon Golgotha's crest
Three crosses stretched their empty arms,
Etched dark against the west.
And blood from nail-pierced hands and feet
And tortured thorn-crowned head
And thrust of hatred's savage spear
Had stained one dark cross red.
Emblem of shame and pain and death
It stood beside the way,
But sign of love and hope and life
We lift it high today.

Where horror grips the stoutest heart,
Where bursting shells shriek high,
Where human bodies shrapnel scourged
By thousands suffering lie;
Threading the shambles of despair,
Mid agony and strife,
Come fleetest messengers who wear
The crimson cross of life.
To friend and foe alike they give
Their strength and healing skill,
For those who wear the crimson cross
Must "do the Master's will."

Can we, so safely sheltered here,
Refuse to do our part?
When some who wear the crimson cross
Are giving life and heart
To succor those who bear our flag,

Who die that we may live—
 Shall we accept their sacrifice
 And then refuse to give?
 Ah, no! Our debt to God and man
 We can, we will fulfill,
 For we, who wear the crimson cross,
 Must "do the Master's will."

PIERROT GOES

CHARLOTTE BECKER
 IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

UP among the chimneys tall
 Lay the garret of Pierrot.
 Here came trooping to his call
 Fancies no one else might know;
 Here he bade the spiders spin
 Webs to hide his treasure in.

Here he heard the night wind croon
 Slumber-songs for sleepyheads;
 Here he spied the spendthrift moon
 Strew her silver on the leads;
 Here he wove a coronet
 Of quaint lyrics for Pierrette.

But the bugles blew him down
 To the fields with war beset;
 Marched him past the quiet town,
 Past the window of Pierrette;
 Comrade now of sword and lance,
 Pierrot gave his dreams to France.

A SERBIAN EPITAPH

V. STANIMIROVIC

After the retreat of the Serbian Army across the mountains of Albania in 1915, the survivors who reached the coast were shipped to Corfu. Here, and in the neighboring island of Vido, many of them died—to begin with, at the rate of hundreds a day. Some of them were buried at sea. Others lie in common graves. In the midst of the mounds which mark their resting-place, and which vary in size, there stands a cross. On it is a Serbian inscription, written by the poet, V. Stanimirovic, and translated for the London Westminster Gazette by Mr. L. F. Waring:

NEVER a Serbian flower shall bloom
 In exile on our far-off tomb.
 Our little ones shall watch in vain:
 Tell them we shall not come again.

Yet greet for us our fatherland,
 And kiss for us her sacred strand.
 These mounds shall tell the years to be
 Of men who died to make her free.

THE NIGHTINGALES OF FLANDERS

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING
 IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book.

"Le rossignol n'est pas mobilise."—A French Soldier

THE nightingales of Flanders,
 They had not gone to war;
 A soldier heard them singing
 Where they had sung before.

The earth was torn and quaking,
 The sky about to fall;
 The nightingales of Flanders,
 They minded not at all.

At intervals we heard them
 Between the guns, he said,
 Making a thrilling music
 Above the listening dead.

Of woodland and of orchard
 And roadside tree bereft,
 The nightingales of Flanders
 Were singing "France is left!"

THE WIDOW

MISS C. M. MITCHELL
 IN PUNCH

Reproduced by special permission of the Proprietors of "Punch"

MY heart is numb with sorrow;
 The long days dawn and wane;
 To me no sweet tomorrow
 Will bring my man again.

Yet must my grief be hidden—
 Life makes insistent claim,
 And women, anguish-ridden,
 Their rebel hearts must tame.

For while, my vigil keeping,
 I face the eternal law,
 Here on my breast lies sleeping
 The son he never saw.

PERSHING AT THE TOMB OF LAFAYETTE

AMELIA JOSEPHINE BURR

From Amelia Josephine Burr's book of poems, "The Silver Trumpet." Published and copyright, 1918, by George H. Doran Company, New York. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

THEY knew they were fighting our war. As the months grew to years
 Their men and their women had watched through their blood and their tears
 For a sign that we knew, we who could not have come to be free
 Without France, long ago. And at last from the threatening sea
 The stars of our strength on the eyes of their weariness rose
 And he stood among them, the sorrow-strong hero we chose
 To carry our flag to the tomb of that Frenchman whose name
 A man of our country could once more pronounce without shame.
 What crown of rich words would he set for all time on this day?
 The past and the future were listening what he would say—
 Only this, from the white-flaming heart of a passion austere,
 Only this—ah, but France understood! "Lafayette, we are here."

TRAINS

LIEUT. JOHN PIERRE ROCHE

From Lieutenant Roche's book of poems, "Rimes in Olive Drab." Robert M. McBride & Company, Publishers, New York. Copyright, 1918. Special permission to insert in this book.

Lieutenant Roche has deftly caught and preserved in words the strange vision of unannounced trains that flashed now and then past towns and villages bearing American troops from unknown camps to unknown ports of embarkation—the flash of faces of men about whom it was known only that they came from the shops and fields of home and were going across the seas to fight somewhere, for those who stood and gazed as they whirled by. The mystery, the roar of wheels, the eddying dust and the silence that followed infuse these lines with picture and sound that will stay in the minds of any who saw such trains go hurrying away.

OVER thousands of miles
 Of shining steel rails,
 Past green and red semaphores
 And unheeding flagmen,
 Trains are running,
 Trains, trains, trains.

Rattling through tunnels
 And clicking by way stations,
 Curving through hills, past timber,
 Out into the open places,
 Flashing past silos and barns
 And whole villages,
 Until finally they echo
 Against the squat factories
 That line the approach to the cities.

Trains, trains, trains
 With the fire boxes wide open,
 Giant Moguls and old-time Baldwins
 And oil-burners on the Southern Pacific,
 Fire boxes wide open
 Flaring against the night,
 Like a tremendous watch fire

Where the sentries cluster at their post.
 Trains, trains, trains
 Serpentine strings of cars
 Loaded with boys and men—
 The legion of the ten-year span
 To whom has been given the task
 Of seeking the Great Adventure.

Swaying through the North and South,
 And East and West,
 Freightied with the Willing
 And the Unwilling;
 Packed with the Thinking
 And the Unthinking,
 Pushing on to the Unknown
 Away from the shelter and security
 Of the accustomed into the Great Adventure.

Trains, trains, trains
 With their coach sides scrawled
 With chalked bravado and, sometimes,
 With their windows black
 With yelling boys,
 In open-mouthed exultation
 That they do not feel,
 Rushing farther and farther
 From the known into the unseeable.

Trains, trains, trains
 With sky-larking boys in khaki,
 Munching sandwiches and drinking pop;
 Or, tired and without their depot swagger,
 Curled up on the red-plush seats;
 Or asleep, with a stranger, in the Pullmans.

They rush past our camp,
 Which lies against the railroad,
 With the crossing alarm jangling caution,
 And fade into the dust or night.
 Leaving us to conjecture where,
 As they have left others to wonder—
 As they must wonder themselves
 When they are done
 With the shouting and hand-shaking
 And kissing and hat-waving and singing.

Trains, trains, trains
 Clicking on into unforecast days—
 Away from the shelter and security
 Of the accustomed into the Great Adventure.

CHRIST IN FLANDERS

L. W.

IN THE SPECTATOR

WE had forgotten You, or very nearly—
 You did not seem to touch us very nearly—
 Of course we thought about You now and then;
 Especially in any time of trouble—
 We knew that You were good in time of trouble—
 But we are very ordinary men.

And there were always other things to think of—
 There's lots of things a man has got to think of—
 His work, his home, his pleasure, and his wife;
 And so we only thought of You on Sunday—
 Sometimes, perhaps, not even on a Sunday—
 Because there's always lots to fill one's life.

And, all the while, in the street or lane or byway—
In country lane, in city street, or byway—

You walked among us, and we did not see.
Your feet were bleeding as You walked our pavements—
How did we miss Your Footprints on our pavements?—
Can there be other folk as blind as we?

Now we remember; over here in Flanders—
(It isn't strange to think of You in Flanders)—

This hideous warfare seems to make things clear.
We never thought about You much in England—
But now that we are far away from England—
We have no doubts, we know that You are here.

You helped us pass the jest along the trenches—
Where, in cold blood, we waited in the trenches—
You touched its ribaldry and made it fine.
You stood beside us in our pain and weakness—
We're glad to think You understand our weakness—
Somehow it seems to help us not to whine.

We think about You kneeling in the Garden—
Ah! God! the agony of that dread Garden—
We know You prayed for us upon the Cross.
If anything could make us glad to bear it—
'Twould be the knowledge that You willed to bear it—
Pain—death—the uttermost of human loss.

Though we forgot You—You will not forget us—
We feel so sure that You will not forget us—
But stay with us until this dream is past.
And so we ask for courage, strength, and pardon—
Especially, I think, we ask for pardon—
And that You'll stand beside us to the last.

AN AMERICAN CREED

EVERARD JACK APPLETON

By permission of Stewart & Kidd Company, Cincinnati, Publishers of "With the Colors," by Everard Jack Appleton. Copyright, 1918.

STRAIGHT thinking,
Straight talking,
Straight doing,
And a firm belief in the might of right.

Patience linked with patriotism,
Justice added to kindliness,
Uncompromising devotion to this country,
And active, not passive, Americanism.

To talk less, to mean more,
To complain less, to accomplish more,
And to so live that every one of us is ready to look
Eternity in the face at any moment, and be unafraid!

RUNNER MCGEE

(WHO HAD "RETURN IF POSSIBLE" ORDERS.)

EDGAR A. GUEST

From Edgar A. Guest's book of war time rhymes, entitled "Over Here." Published and copyright, 1918, by The Reilly & Britton Company, Chicago. Special permission to insert in this book.

YOU'VE heard a good deal of the telephone wires,"
He said as we sat at our ease,
And talked of the struggle that's taking men's lives
In these terrible days o'er the seas,
"But I've been through the thick of the thing
And I know when a battle's begun
It isn't the 'phone you depend on for help.
It's the legs of a boy who can run.

"It isn't because of the 'phone that I'm here.

Today you are talking to me
Because of the grit and the pluck of a boy.

His title was Runner McGee.

We were up to our dead line an' fighting alone;

Some plan had miscarried, I guess,
And the help we were promised had failed to arrive.

We were showing all signs of distress.

"Our curtain of fire was ahead of us still,

An' theirs was behind us an' thick,
An' there wasn't a thing we could do for ourselves—

The few of us left had to stick.

You haven't much chance to get central an' talk

On the 'phone to the music of guns;
Gettin' word to the chief is a matter right then
That is up to the fellow who runs.

"I'd sent four of 'em back with the R. I. P. sign,

Which means to return if you can,
But none of 'em got through the curtain of fire;

My hurry call died with the man.
Then Runner McGee said he'd try to get through.

I hated to order the kid
On his mission of death; thought he'd never get by,
But somehow or other he did.

"Yes, he's dead. Died an hour after bringing us word

That the chief was aware of our plight,
An' for us to hang onto the ditch that we held;

The reserves would relieve us at night.
Then we stuck to our trench an' we stuck to our guns;

You know how you'll fight when you know
That new strength is coming to fill up the gaps.

There's heart in the force of your blow.

"It wasn't till later I got all the facts.

They wanted McGee to remain.

They begged him to stay. He had cheated death once,

'An' was foolish to try it again.

'R. I. P. are my orders,' he answered them all,

'An' back to the boys I must go;

Four of us died comin' out with the news.

It will help them to know that you know.' "

THE SOLDIER'S FOLKS AT HOME

FROM THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

WE often sit upon the porch on sultry August nights,
When fireflies out upon the lawn are soft enchanted lights

From Fairyland; when, far away, a vagrant nightingale
Is sobbing from a bursting heart his tragic untold tale.

We often sit upon the porch, quite silently, for we Are seeing golden wonder-worlds that no one else may see.

My mother sighs; I feel her hand upon my ruffled hair,
The while I know she thinks of one, of one who is not there. . . .

And grandma, with her down-bent head, is dreaming of the day

When to the strains of "Dixie Land" her sweetheart marched away.

And brother stares into the dusk, with vivid eyes aflame,
And hears the stirring call to arms, to battle and to fame!

My little sister, half asleep, holds tight against her breast
A battered doll with china eyes that she herself has dressed;

And baby brother holds my hand, and thinks of cakes and toys
 That grow on trees in some fair land for perfect little boys.
 And auntie holds her head erect, and seems to dare the fates
 With eyes that hold the glowing look of one who hopes and waits.

We often sit upon the porch on sultry August nights
 When fireflies out upon the lawn are vague enchanted
 lights,
 And no one speaks, for each one dreams and plans, perhaps, and strays,
 A wanderer through years to come, a ghost through bygone days,
 And as the stars far in the sky come shining softly through,
 My heart and soul are all one prayer—one silver prayer for you.

THREE HILLS

EVERARD OWEN

From Mr. Owen's book, "Three Hills and Other Poems." Sidgwick & Jackson, Ltd., Publishers, London, England. Special permission to insert in this book.

THERE is a hill in England,
 Green fields and a school I know,
 Where the balls fly fast in summer, •
 And the whispering elm-trees grow,
 A little hill, a dear hill,
 And the playing fields below.

There is a hill in Flanders,
 Heaped with a thousand slain,
 Where the shells fly night and noontide
 And the ghosts that died in vain—
 A little hill, a hard hill,
 To the souls that died in pain.

There is a hill in Jewry,
 Three crosses pierce the sky,
 On the midmost He is dying
 To save all those who die—
 A little hill, a kind hill
 To souls in jeopardy.

MIKE DILLON, DOUGHBOY

LIEUT. JOHN PIERRE ROCHE

From Lieutenant Roche's book of poems, "Rimes in Olive Drab." Robert M. McBride & Company, Publishers, New York. Copyright, 1918. Special permission to insert in this book.

"Doughboy" is an old nickname for a United States infantryman. When our army went into what is now New Mexico, Arizona and California to quiet the Mexicans hostilities that preceded the war of 1846, the infantry fell into a way of camping in houses built by the natives with sun-dried bricks of adobé mud. The cavalry, having to lie in the open with the horses, were joked thereat and came back by calling the infantry dobie boys. The name stuck and by an easy slide arrived at the present form.

MIKE DILLON was a doughboy
 And wore the issue stuff;
 He wasn't much to look at—
 In fact, was rather rough;
 He served his time as rookie—
 At drilling in the sun,
 And cleared a lot of timber
 And polished up his gun.

Mike Dillon was a private
 With all the word entails;

He cursed and chewed tobacco
 And overlooked his nails.
 You never saw Mike Dillon
 At dances ultra nice;
 In fact, inspection found him
 Enjoying body lice.

If Mike had married money
 Or had a little drag,
 He might have got a brevet
 And missed a little "fag";
 But as a social figure
 He simply wasn't there—
 So Mike continued drilling
 And knifing up his fare.

In course of time they shipped 'em
 And shipped 'em over where
 A man like Mike can sidestep
 The frigid social stare,
 And do the job of soldier
 Without the fancy frills,
 And keep a steady footing
 In the pace that really kills.

Now Mike did nothing special;
 He only did his best:
 He stuck and "went on over"—
 And got it in the chest;
 He played it fair and squarely
 Without a social air,
 And Mike is now in heaven
 And at least a corporal there!

WHEN THE FRENCH BAND PLAYS

ANONYMOUS

IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

THERE'S a military band that plays, on Sunday afternoons,

In a certain nameless city's quaint old square.

It can rouse the blood to battle with its patriotic tunes,
And still render hymns as gentle as a prayer.

When it starts "Ave Maria" there is no one in the throng
But would doff his cap, his heart to heaven raise;
And who would shrink from combat when, with brasses
sounding strong,

There is flung out on the breeze "La Marseillaise"?

When it starts to render "Sambre et Meuse," the march that won the day

At the battle of the Marne, one sees again

The grey-green hosts of Hundom melt before the stern array

Of our gallant sister-ally's blue-clad men.

And when it plays our Anthem, with rendition bold and clear—

While the khaki lads stand steady—then we feel
That, though tongues and ways may vary, we've found brothers over here,

Tried in war, and in allegiance true as steel.

For it's olive-drab, horizon-blue, packed closely side by side,

Till their colors set ablaze the grey old square;

And it's olive-drab, horizon-blue, whatever may betide,
That will blaze the way to victory "up there."

So, while standing thus together, let us pledge anew our troth

To the Cause—the world set free!—for which we fight.

As the evening twilight gilds the ranks of blue and khaki both,

And the bugles die away into the night.

THE OLD GANG ON THE CORNER

WILLIAM HERSCHELL
IN COLLIER'S WEEKLY

Permission to reproduce in this book

THE Old Gang on the Corner! What an arrant tribe they were;
The Widow Kelly's Connie—he had always worried her!
The Schultzs boys, Jake and Rudy; the parson's own,
Chub Smith,
"Who," sister told the neighbors, "they can't do nothin' with."
Young Tony Boots, the Dago, and Scamp, the tinner's son—
To them a mischief thought of was a mischief quickly
done.

The Old Gang on the Corner! In the arc light's friendly glow
They trooped each night till Tim the Cop came by and made them go.
But all that now is ended, for the Sword of Hate is drawn—
The Old Gang on the Corner from its happy haunt is gone.
The street lamp idly sputters; Tim, the lonely, walks his beat,
His good heart well ahunger for the Old Gang in the street.

The Old Gang on the Corner! Now each loyal mother brags
No other neighborhood can boast as many service flags.
Con Kelly's won a sergenty; the parson's black-sheep
son
Has had his picture printed for heroic deeds he's done.

The Schultz boys, in the navy, though they yet are in their teens,
 Are mates with Scamp and Tony in the chase for submarines.

The Old Gang on the Corner! Yes, we've all forgotten now
 The Hallowe'en they calcimined McDougall's muley cow, We've put aside the memories of cream and cake they stole
 When our church had a festival to pay for last year's coal.
 All that is in the Yesterday—they're now our fighting
 men—
 And, God, won't we be happy if they all come home again?

THE BATTLE-LINE

J. B. DOLLARD
 IN THE GLOBE, TORONTO

Permission to reproduce in this book

ATHWART that land of bloss'ming vine
 Stretches the awful battle-line;
 A lark hangs singing in the sky,
 With sullen shrapnel bursting nigh!
 Along the poplar-bordered road
 The peasant trudges with his load,
 While horsemen and artillery
 Rush to red fields that are to be!
 The plains for tillage furrowed well
 Are now replowed with shot and shell!
 The ditches, swollen by the rain,
 Show bloated faces of the slain.
 The hedge-rows sweet with leaf and flower
 Now mask the cannon's murderous power!

Small birds by household cares opprest
 Beg truce and time to build their nest.
 The sun sinks down—oh, blest release!
 And the spent world cries out for peace,
 In vain! In vain! Tho' mild stars shine,
 War wakes the thundering battle-line.

A CHANT OF ARMY COOKS

ANONYMOUS

IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

WE never were made to be seen on parade
 When sweethearts and such line the streets;
 When the band starts to blare, look for us—we ain't
 there—

We're mussing around with the eats.
 It's fun to step out to the echoing shout
 Of a crowd that forgets how you're fed,
 While we're soiling our duds hacking eyes out of spuds--
 You know what Napoleon said.

When the mess sergeant's gay, you can bet hell's to pay
 For the boys who are standing in line;
 When the boys get a square, then the sergeant is there
 With your death warrant ready to sign.
 If you're long on the grub, then you're damned for a dub,
 If you're short, you're a miser instead,
 But, however you feel, you must get the next meal—
 You know what Napoleon said.

You think it's a cinch when you come to the clinch
 For the man who is grinding the meat;
 In the heat of the fight, why the cook's out of sight
 With plenty of room to retreat.

But a plump of a shell in a kitchen is hell
 When the roof scatters over your head,
 And you crawl on your knees to pick up the K. P.'s—
 You know what Napoleon said.

If the war ever ends, we'll go back to our friends—
 In the army we've nary a one;
 We'll list to the prattle of this or that battle,
 And then, when the story is done,
 We'll say, when they ask, "Now what was your task,
 And what is the glory you shed?"
 "You see, how they thrive—well, we kept 'em alive!
 You know what Napoleon said."

THE DRUM

JOSEPH LEE

"Come to me, and I will give you flesh."—Old Pibrochadh.

COME!
 Says the drum;
 Though graves be hollow,
 Yet follow, follow:
 Come!
 Says the drum.

Life!
 Shrills the fife,
 Is in strife—
 Leave love and wife:
 Come!
 Says the drum.

Ripe!
 Screams the pipe,
 Is the field—
 Swords and not sickles wield:
 Come!
 Says the drum.

The drum
 Says, Come!
 Though graves be hollow,
 Yet follow, follow:
 Come!
 Says the drum.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE

MAJOR KENDALL BANNING
 SIGNAL RESERVE CORPS, AVIATION SECTION, U. S. ARMY

GOD, the Master Pilot,
 Or gods, if such there be—
 Pour me no weakling's measure
 When ye pour the wine for me!
 Of pain, of love, of pleasure,
 I'll drain the draught ye give;
 Of good and ill, give me the fill
 Of the life ye bade me live!

Spare me no tithe of favor,
 With fortune pave my path,
 Nor hold the hand of vengeance
 When I deserve your wrath.
 Whatever fates ye send me,
 Whatever cast the sky,
 Grant me the grace to live a man
 And as a man to die!

Upon the good I render
 Let shine your proudest sun:
 And rest me in the valleys
 When my last trick is done.
 For these your utmost portions,
 I'll pay the utmost toll,
 So this my life, become the great Adventure of my soul!

TO THE WRITER OF "CHRIST IN FLANDERS"

E. M. V.
IN THE SPECTATOR

ON the battlefields of Flanders men have blessed you in their pain;
For you told us Who was with us, and your words were not in vain.

All you said was very gentle, but we felt you knew our ways;
And we tried to find the Footprints we had missed in other days.

When we found Those blood-stained Footsteps, we have followed to the End;
For we know that only Death can show the features of our Friend.

In the Mansions of the Master, He will make the meaning plain
Of the battlefields of Flanders, of the Crucifix of Pain.

TO SOMEBODY

HAROLD SETON
IN MUNSEY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book.

THEY'VE put us through our paces;
They say we're doing fine;
We'll soon go to our places
Upon the firing-line.
Some chaps will fight for mothers,
And some for wives so true;

For sweethearts many others,
And I will fight for you!

Through all these months of training
We've cherished hopeful thoughts
And drilled without complaining,
Like soldiers and good sports.
We're warring for a reason,
We've sworn to see this through;
To falter would be treason,
And I will fight for you!

Your presence will be near me,
Your voice will call my name;
You'll comfort me and cheer me,
Your love, behold, I claim!
'Twould take more than an ocean
To separate us two;
I'll hold unto this notion,
And I will fight for you!

WAR

COL. WILLIAM LIGHTFOOT VISSCHER
IN THE SCOOP, THE CHICAGO PRESS CLUB'S MAGAZINE

BY blazing homes, through forests torn
And blackened harvest fields,
The grim and drunken god of war
In frenzied fury reels.

His breath—the sulph'rous stench of guns—
That death and famine deals
And Pity, pleading, wounded falls
Beneath his steel-shod heels.

A MARCHING SOLILOQUY

BY A MEMBER OF THE S. A. T. C., NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE, NAPERVILLE, ILL.

"Left!

Left!"

Had a good girl when I

"Left!

Left!"

Mighty good pal when I

"Left!"

"One! Two! Three! Four!"

How many miles

more?

"Left!

"Left!

Left!"

Booked for a wife when I

"Left!

Left!"

That was my life when I

"Left!"

"One! Two! Three! Four!"

Hear old

Lieutenant roar

"Left!"

WHILE SUMMERS PASS

ALINE MICHAELIS
IN THE ENTERPRISE, BEAUMONT, TEXAS

SUMMER comes and summer goes,
Buds the primrose, fades the rose;
But his footfall on the grass,
Coming swiftly to my door,
I shall hear again no more,
Though a thousand summers pass.

Once he loved the clovers well,
Loved the larkspur and bluebell.
And the scent the plum-blooms yield;
But strange flowers his soul beguiled,
Pallid lilies, laurels wild,
Blooming in a crimson field.

So he plucked the laurels there,
And he found them sweet and fair
In that field of blood-red hue;
And, when on a summer night
Moonlight drenched my clovers white,
Lo! He plucked Death's lilies, too.

It may be that e'en to-night,
In the Gardens of Delight,
Where his shining soul must dwell,
He has found some flowers more sweet
Than the clovers at my feet,
Some celestial asphodel.

But while summer comes and goes,
With the primrose and the rose
Comes his footfall on the grass—
Gladly, lightly to my door—
I shall hear it echo o'er,
Though a thousand summers pass.

THE MARINES

ADOLPHE E. SMYLIE
OF THE VIGILANTES

Permission to reproduce in this book

“PARDON! he has no Engleesh, heem,
 Il ne parle que Française,
 I spik it leetle some Monsieur,
 Vaire bad, j'en suis fâché—
 Marines? Mais oui! I fight wiz zem
 At Château Thierry
 An' on ze Ourcq an' Marne in grand Bon camaraderie.
 I see zem fight at bois Belleau,
 Like sauvage make ze yell,—
 Sacré nom de Dieu! zoze sailor man
 Eez fightin' like ze hell!
 All time zey smile when make ze push,
 Magnifique zaire élan,
 Zey show ze heart of lion
 For delight our brav Franchman.
 An' in ze tranch at rest, zoze troop
 From ze Etats Unis
 Queeck make ze good frien' of poilu
 Wiz beeg slap on ze knee!
 Zey make ze song an' joke, si drôle
 An' pass ze cigarette;
 Zey call us goddam good ol' scout
 Like Marquis La Fayette.
 Next day, mebbe, again ze taps—
 Ze volley in ze air.—
 Adieu! some fightin' sailor man
 Eez gone West. C'est la guerre!
 No more ze smile, ze hug, ze hand
 Queeck wiz ze cigarette;

C'est vrai, at funerall of heem
 Ze poilu's eye eez wet.
 But, every day like tidal wave,—
 Like human avalanche,— Ze transport bring more Yankee troop,
 To get ze beeg revanche!
 Zen from ze heart Américaine
 Come milliards of monnaie;
 Eet eez ze end! Your country bring Triomphant liberté.
 So, au revoir! I mus' go on
 But first I tell to you
 What some high Officier remark
 Zat day at bois Belleau.
 He says, our great Napoleon
 Wiz envy would turn green
 Eef he could see zoze sailor man,—
 Zoze Uncle Sam Marines!"

AN AMBULANCE DRIVER'S PRAYER

LIEUT. CHAPLAIN THOMAS F. COAKLEY
 IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

'MID blinding rain this inky night,
 Loud bursting shells each foot of road,
 Thy Light, O Christ, will guide me right,
 To save this gasping, dying load.

Their shattered limbs have followed Thee;
 Their wounded hands have done Thy work.
 They bled, O Lord, to make men free;
 They fought the fight—they did not shirk.

NOT TOO OLD TO FIGHT

T. C. HARBAUGH
IN THE CHICAGO LEDGER

MY name is Danny Bloomer and my age is eighty-three,

Years ago I went with Sherman to the ever sunny sea.
I stood my ground at Gettysburg, that bloody summer day,

When gallant Pickett rushed the hill and lost his boys
in gray;

And now our starry banner is insulted and defied,
The kaiser tears it into shreds and glories in his pride;
Just pass the word across the sea to his stronghold of might,

And say that Danny Bloomer's here and not too old to fight.

I gave my youth to Uncle Sam in years I'll ne'er forget,
In mem'ry of those stirring times my old blood tingles yet.

With four score years upon me I can lift the same old gun,

And to face our Flag's insulter will be everlasting fun.
Please say that Danny Bloomer is ready for the fray, Cry "Forward, march!" and see him in the good old ranks today.

I love the flag of Washington because it stands for Right,
And that is why I tell you I am not too old to fight.

'Tis true I'm somewhat crippled, but I do not care for that,

I feel as young as when I saw the tilt of Sherman's hat;
I want to do my duty again before I die,
And see Old Glory proudly in the streets of Berlin fly.

I do not know the kaiser, but I hope within a year Amid the roar of cannon he will say, "Old Bloomer's here!"

Yes, hand me down a rifle and I will use it right,
Your Uncle Danny Bloomer isn't yet too old to fight.
We've borne their insults long enough—they make me long to go.

I want to squint along my gun and aim it at the foe;
I'll eat the same old rations that I ate in '64,
And feel the blood of youth again amid the battle's roar.
I haven't long to tarry here until my work is done,
But I want to show the kaiser we're not in it for fun;
So give me marching orders and I'll disappear from sight,
For I am Danny Bloomer, and I'm not too old to fight.

A WAYSIDE IN FRANCE

ADOLPHE E. SMYLLIE
IN THE NEW YORK HERALD

Permission to reproduce in this book

"COME shake hands, my little peach blossom.
That's right, dear, climb up on my knee.
This big Yankee soldier is lonesome—
Ah, now we'll be friends, ma chérie.
We won't understand one another,
Your round eyes are telling me so,
But the cling of your chubby fingers
Is a language that all daddies know.
When I caught a sight of your pigtails
And those eyes of violet blue,
It made me heart-hungry, ma petite,

For I've a wee girl just like you.
 She lives 'way across the wide ocean,
 Out where the bald eagles nest,
 And she knows all the chipmunks and gophers
 At my shack out in the West."

"Tu dis l'ouest! Est-ce ton pays?
 Veux-tu, quand tu iras chez-toi—
 Maman est toujours à pleurer—
 Me retrouver mon soldat Papa?
 Il était avec sa batterie
 Près des Anglais là, en campagne,
 Mais Papa est allé dans l'ouest,
 Des Anglais disaient à Maman.
 Alors, Maman sera heureuse
 Et, tu vois elle ne pleurera plus;
 Je veux te donner un baiser,— Merci! Tu es si bon pour nous!"

There she goes! She told me her secret,
 Kissed me and then flew away,—
 Say, Poilu! You savez some English,
 Now what did that little tot say?
 "She say Engleeshman tol' her Mama
 Zat her soldat Papa eez gone West!
 You said West, bien! Zen you live zaire,
 So she make you her leetle request,
 Zat you find heem in your countree
 So her Mama no more she weel cry;
 Zen she thank you an' kees you, si joyeuse,— Pauvre mignonne, she think you weel try!"

MISSING

"IRIS"

FROM B. L. T.'S COLUMN IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

THE soldier boys are marching, are marching past my door;

They're off to fight for Freedom, to wage and win the war;

And yet I cannot cheer them, my eyes are full of tears—
My son, who should be with them, is dead these many years.

I've missed his boyish laughter, I've missed his sunny
ways,

I've lived alone with sorrow through endless empty days.

But now my bitter longing dims all the grief before—

His boyhood friends are marching, without him, past my door.

I've envied happy mothers the children at their knee;
Their very joys seemed given to mock my grief and me.
Time healed those wounds, but this one will pain me while I live—

When Freedom called her warriors, I had no son to give.

And still the boys are marching, are marching toward the sea,

To suffer and to conquer, that all men may be free.

Be glad for them, O mothers! and leave to me the tears—

My son, who should be with them, is dead these many years.

THE RIVERS OF FRANCE

H. J. M.

IN THE ENGLISH REVIEW

THE rivers of France are ten score and twain,
 But five are the names that we know—
 The Marne, the Vesle, the Ourcq, and the Aisne,
 And the Somme of the swampy flow.

The rivers of France, from source to the sea,
 Are nourished by many a rill,
 But these five, if ever a drought there be,
 The fountains of sorrow would fill.

The rivers of France shine silvery white,
 But the waters of five are red
 With the richest blood, in the fiercest fight
 For Freedom, that ever was shed.

The rivers of France sing soft as they run,
 But five have a song of their own,
 That hymns the fall of the arrogant one
 And the proud cast down from his throne.

The rivers of France all quietly take
 To sleep in the house of their birth,
 But the carnadined wave of five shall break
 On the uttermost strands of Earth.

Five rivers of France, see their names are writ
 On a banner of crimson and gold,
 And the glory of those who fashioned it Shall nevermore cease to be told.

JUST THINKING

HUDSON HAWLEY

IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A. E. F., FRANCE

STANDIN' up here on the fire-step,
 Lookin' ahead in the mist,
 With a tin hat over your ivory
 And a rifle clutched in your fist;
 Waitin' and watchin' and wond'rin'
 If the Hun's comin' over tonight—
 Say, aren't the things you think of
 Enough to give you a fright?

Things you ain't even thought of
 For a couple o' months or more;
 Things that 'ull set you laughin',
 Things that 'ull make you sore;
 Things that you saw in the movies,
 Things that you saw on the street,
 Things that you're really proud of Things that are—not so sweet;

Debts that are past collectin',
 Stories you hear and forget,
 Ball games and birthday parties,
 Hours of drill in the wet;
 Headlines, recruitin' posters,
 Sunset 'way out at sea,
 Evenings of pay-days—golly—
 It's a queer thing, this memory!

Faces of pals in Homeburg,
 Voices of womenfolk,
 Verses you learnt in schooldays
 Pop up in the mist and smoke

As you stand there grippin' that rifle,
 A-starin', and chilled to the bone,
 Wonderin' and wonderin' and wonderin',
 Just thinkin' there—all alone:

When will the war be over?
 When will the gang break through?
 What will the U. S. look like?
 What will there be to do?
 Where will the Boches be then?
 Who will have married Nell?
 When's the relief a-comin' up?—
 Gosh! But this thinkin's hell!

THE EVENING STAR

HAROLD SETON
 IN THE CHICAGO EVENING POST

THE evening star a child espied,
 The one star in the sky.
 "Is that God's service flag?" he cried,
 And waited for reply.

The mother paused a moment ere
 She told the little one—
 "Yes, that is why the star is there!
 God gave His only Son!"

COLUMBIA'S PRAYER

THOMAS P. BASHAW

IN THE HERALD AND EXAMINER, CHICAGO

Permission to reproduce in this book

BOY in khaki, boy in blue,
 I am watching over you,
 Going forth amid the rattle
 Of the drums that call to battle.

Oft have men waged fight for me,
 Fought to make their brothers free;
 God protect and succor you,
 Boy in khaki, boy in blue.

God go with you on your mission,
 And in His all-wise decision
 Turn this tide of war to you,
 Boy in khaki, boy in blue.

With the Stars and Stripes high o'er you,
 Snatch the vic'try just before you,
 Heaven keep, encompass you,
 Boy in khaki, boy in blue.

When the foe is rent asunder,
 And the world looks on in wonder,
 Paying tribute rare to you,
 Boy in khaki, boy in blue,

God return you safe to me;
 To Columbia—Liberty;
 'Tis my prayer, my hope for you,
 Boy in khaki, boy in blue.

TWO VIEWPOINTS

AMELIA JOSEPHINE BURR
OF THE VIGILANTES

Permission to reproduce in this book.

A German soldier in his journal wrote:

HE was a French Boy Scout—a little lad
No bigger than my Hansel. He refused
To tell if any of his countrymen
Were hidden thereabout. Fifty yards on
We ran into an ambush. Well, of course
We shot him—little fool! Poor little fool!
Thinking himself a hero as he stood
Facing our guns, so little and so young
Against the sunny vineyard-green, I thought
What wasted courage! for the child was brave,
Fool as he was. The pity . . .

Here there came
A sudden shrapnel, and the writing stopped. . . .

*Did I write that? O God—did I write that?
Mine—they were mine, the folly and the waste.
Now the keen edge of death has cut away
The eyelids of my soul and I must bear
The perfect understanding of the dead.
Now that I know myself as I am known,
How shall my soul endure Eternity?
God, God, if there be pity left for me,
Send to my son the child that I despised
A messenger to burn into his soul
While still he lives, the truth I died to learn!*

DESTROYERS

"KLAXON"

IN BLACKWOODS MAGAZINE

THROUGH the dark night
And the fury of battle
Pass the destroyers in showers of spray.
As the Wolf-pack to the flank of the cattle,
We shall close in on them—shadows of gray.
In from ahead,
Through shell-flashes red,
We shall come down to them, after the Day,
Whistle and crash
Of salvo and volley
Round us and into us as we attack
Light on our target they'll flash in their folly,
Splitting our ears with shrapnel-crack.
Fire as they will,
We'll come to them still,
Roar as they may at us—Back—Go Back!
White though the sea
To the shell-splashes foaming,
We shall be there at the death of the Hun.
Only we pray for a star in the gloaming
(Light for torpedoes and none for a gun).
Lord—of Thy Grace
Make it a race,
Over the sea with the night to run.

NINETEEN-SEVENTEEN

SUSAN HOOKER WHITMAN
IN THE KANSAS CITY STAR

“IT is long since knighthood was in flower,
 There are no men today who tower
 Above their kind—the knights are dust,
 Their names forgot, their good swords rust,”
 We idly say. And yet, in truth—
 The brave soul has eternal youth,
 Like the great lighthouse rising free,
 Whose far-flung beams guide ships at sea,
 God lifts above his fellow man
 A steadfast soul to dare and plan,
 A king of men, by right divine,
 Who in his forehead bears the sign—
 He walks along the city street;
 Unknowing, in the fields we meet
 A modern knight in whose hand lies
 A mighty Nation’s destinies.

Then say no more, the knights are gone;
 Honor and Truth and Right live on,
 And men today would keep the bridge
 Horatius kept—from rocky ridge
 Heroic Youth would still fling down
 His horse, himself, to save the town.

Columbia calls!

Off with your hats and lift them high,
 Our own, our sons are passing by.

THE SILENT ARMY.

IAN ADANAC
IN THE MONTREAL DAILY STAR

NO bugle is blown, no roll of drums,
 No sound of an army marching.
 No banners wave high, no battle-cry
 Comes from the war-worn fields where they lie,
 The blue sky overarching.
 The call sounds clearer than the bugle call
 From this silent, dreamless army.
 "No cowards were we, when we heard the call,
 For freedom we grudged not to give our all,"
 Is the call from the silent army.

Hushed and quiet and still they lie,
 This silent, dreamless army,
 While living comrades spring to their side,
 And the bugle-call and the battle-cry
 Are heard as dreamer and dreamless lie
 Under the stars of the arching sky,
 The men who have heard from the men who have died
 The call of the silent army.

THE SOURCE OF NEWS

FROM THE NEEDLE

ABSOLUTE knowledge I have none,
 But my aunt's washerwoman's son
 Heard a policeman on his beat
 Say to a laborer in the street
 That he had a letter just last week,
 Written in the finest Greek,
 From a Chinese coolie in Timbuctoo,
 Who said the niggers in Cuba knew

Of a colored man in a Texas town
 Who got it straight from a circus clown,
 That a man in Klondike heard the news
 From a gang of South American Jews,
 About somebody in Bamboo
 Who heard a man who claimed he knew
 Of a swell society female rake
 Whose mother-in-law will undertake
 To prove that her husband's sister's niece
 Has stated in a printed piece
 That she has a son who has a friend
 Who knows when the war is going to end.

TO MY SON

A poem, anonymous, sent to the Chicago Evening Post by one whose son's regiment was leaving for France.

MY son, at last the fateful day has come
 For us to part. The hours have nearly run.
 May God return you safe to land and home;
 Yet, what God wills, so may His will be done.

Draw tight the belt about your slender frame;
 Flash blue your eyes! Hold high your proud young head!

Today you march in Liberty's fair name,
 To save the line enriched by France's dead!

I would not it were otherwise. And yet
 'Tis hard to speed your marching forth, my son!
 'Tis doubly hard to live without regret
 For love unsaid, and kindnesses undone.

But would the chance were mine with you to stand
 Upon those shores and see our flag unfurled!
 To fight on France's brave, unconquered land
 With Liberty's great sword for all the world!

Beyond the waves, my son, the siren calls,
 The sky is black and Fastnet lies abreast;
 A signal rocket flings its stars and falls
 Across the night to welcome England's guest.

When mid the scud you see the Cornish lights,
 And through the mist you hear faint Devon chimes,
 Thank God for memories of those other nights
 And days on other ships in happier times.

Perhaps you'll stand within the pillared nave
 And aisles where colored sundust falls, and see Old Canterbury Church where Becket gave
 His life's best blood for England's liberty!

Some night you'll walk, perhaps, on Salisbury plain;
 Above Stonehenge the Druid's stars still sleep,
 And on the turf within the circled fane
 Beneath the autumn moon still lie the sheep.

And if you march beside some Kentish hedge,
 And blackberries hang thick clustered o'er the ways,
 Pluck down a branch! Rest by the road's brown edge;
 Eat! Nor forget our last vacation days!

And then the trench in battle-scarred Lorraine;
 The town half burned but held in spite of hell;
 The bridge twice taken, lost, and won again;
 The cratered glacis ripped with mine and shell.

The leafless trees, bare-branched in spite of June;
 The sodden road, the desolated plain;
 The mateless birds, the season out of tune;
 Fair France, at bay, is calling through her pain.

Oh, son! My son! God keep you safe and free—
 Our flag and you! But if the hour must come
 To choose at last 'twixt self and liberty—
 We'll close our eyes! So let God's will be done!

EASTER-EGGS

REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

From this author's "Our Navy at Work," published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co. In 1917, our Government took over a large number of pleasure-yachts, fitted them with a few light guns and depth-charges and sent them into French waters to hunt submarines. They were variously known as "The Suicide Fleet" and "Easter-Eggs." Mr. Kauffman spent some time at sea with them. Permission to reproduce in this book.

NOW, Mr. Wall of Wall St., he built himself a yacht,
 And he built that yacht for comfort and for speed;
 He didn't mean that it should go
 Beyond a hundred miles or so;
 He wanted something made for show,
 Where he could drink and feed:

Then Uncle Sam'l went to war and hadn't any boats,
 Or not enough to guard the stormy green,
 And so he said to Mr. Wall:
 "I'll take your six-feet-over-all
 And set it out to get the call Upon the submarine."

"A cruising-fighter? Never!" (The experts chorused that.)

"She'll sink before she's half-way out to France";
 But Sam cut out her bathtubs white,
 He painted her a perfect fright
 And loaded her with dynamite;
 Says he: "I'll take a chance."

“Good-night!” said Wall of Wall St.; the experts said
it, too;

But Uncle Sam was sot and sibylline;
His little plan, it warn't a josh:
Wall's boat 's as dry 's a mackintosh;
She fights, b' gum; what 's more, b' gosh,
She gits the submarine!

A DIRGE

VICTOR PEROWNE
IN THE LONDON TIMES

THOU art no longer here,
No longer shall we see thy face.
But, in that other place,
Where may be heard
The roar of the world rushing down the wantways of the stars;
And the silver bars
Of heaven's gate
Shine soft and clear:
Thou mayest wait.

No longer shall we see
Thee walking in the crowded streets,
But where the ocean of the Future beats Against the flood-gates of the Present, swirling to this earth,

Another birth
Thou mayest have;
Another Arcady
May thee receive.
Not here thou dost remain,
Thou art gone far away,

Where, at the portals of the day,
The hours ever dance in ring, a silvern-footed throng,

While time looks on,
And seraphs stand
Choiring an endless strain
On either hand.

Thou canst return no more;
Not as the happy time of spring
Comes after winter burgeoning
On wood and wold in folds of living green, for thou art dead.

Our tears we shed
In vain, for thou
Dost pace another shore,
Untroubled now.

THE WOMAN'S GAME

AUTHORSHIP NOT KNOWN

WAS there ever a game we did not share,
Brother of mine?
Or a day when I did not play you fair,
Brother of mine?
"As good as a boy," you used to say,
And I was as eager for the fray,
And as loath to cheat or to run away,
Brother of mine!

You are playing the game that is straight and true,
Brother of mine,
And I'd give my soul to stand next to you,
Brother of mine.

The spirit, indeed, is still the same ;
 I would not shrink from the battle's flame,
 Yet here I stay—at the woman's game,
 Brother of mine!

If the last price must needs be paid,
 Brother of mine,
 You will go forward, unafraid,
 Brother of mine.

Death can so small a part destroy,
 You will have known the fuller joy—
 Ah! would that I had been born a boy,
 Brother of mine!

A FLEMISH VILLAGE

H. A.
 IN LONDON SPECTATOR

GONE is the spire that slept for centuries,
 Whose image in the water, calm and low,
 Was mingled with the lilies green and snow,
 And lost itself in river mysteries.
 The church lies broken near the fallen spire ;
 For here, among these old and human things
 Death swept along the street with feet of fire,
 And went upon his way with moaning wings.
 Above the cluster of these homes forlorn,
 Where giant fleeces of the shells are rolled,
 O'er pavements by the kneeling herdsman worn,
 The wounded saints look out to see their fold.

And silence follows fast, no evening peace,
 But leaden stillness, when the thunder wanes,
 Haunting the slender branches of the trees,
 And settling low upon the listless plains.

FRANCE

CAPT. JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON
 IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE
 From the French of Armentier Ohanian

Permission to reproduce in this book

I WAS an exile from my own country and wandered over the breast of the world seeking another country.

And I came into a land where there was only a long spring and a long autumn, where they did not know the deadly heats of our summers or the mortal colds of our mountains. Among the vines and sunny fields I saw the people of this land at work, ever young of soul, smiling, loving, and kindly.

I asked, "What is the name of this happy place?"

And the answer was, "France the voluptuous."

I came to towns of splendid monuments, of harmonious buildings, of proud triumphal arches of the past, and above always I saw the spires of great cathedrals stretching toward the sky, as if to seize upon the feet of God.

I asked, "What is the name of this marvelous land?"

And the answer was, "France the glorious."

I advanced again, when I was struck by the red color of a large river. . . . It was a river of warm blood that rolled down from afar in thick and heavy waves. I advanced again. Before me dark clouds of smoke hid the endless sky above huge fields of warriors in battle; when these died smiling at death others took their places, singing.

I asked, "What is the name of this chivalrous land?"

And the answer was, "France the courageous."

At last I came to an immense city, of which I saw neither the beginning nor the end, a city full of sumptuous palaces, of parks, and fountains. The sun glistened on the marble of the streets and kissed the serene, resigned faces of women clothed in black. The chimes of churches filled the air with solemn sounds, and words, until then unknown to me, "Te Deum," came from the throats of thousands of thousands.

With respect I asked, "What is the name of this land that mourns?"

And the answer was, "France the victorious."

I kissed the earth of this land and said, "I have found my country, who was an exile."

THE CLERK

B. H. M. HETHERINGTON
IN THE LONDON BOOKMAN

PERCHED upon an office stool, neatly adding figures,
With cuffs gone shiny and a pen behind his ear;
Deep in Liabilities, Goods and Double Entry,
So he worked from year to year.

Diligent and careful, hedged about with figures,
Given soul and body to discount and per cent;
Bounded by the columns of Purchase Book and Journal,
Soberly his moments went.

Now his pen has ceased from adding rows of figures,
Ceased from ruling ledgers and entering amounts:
Clad in sodden khaki, with a gun in Flanders
He is balancing accounts.

POILU

STEUART M. EMERY, A. E. F.
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES

The traditional friendship between the United States and France was recemented under the fire of German guns. In France they celebrated our Fourth of July; in this country, we celebrated the Fourteenth of July, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastile. Yank and Poilu are brothers in war, don't mind the languages. The inextinguishable humor of France never showed more quaintly than in that word, "Poilu." It means "unshaven." More freely, "a man who needs a shave." A whimsical comment upon the French soldier's way of letting his beard grow while he is in the field. Those boys were like the English and our own. They smiled at misery. They were good old sports, bless 'em!

YOU'RE a funny fellow, poilu, in your dinky little cap
And your war worn, faded uniform of blue,
With your multitude of haversacks abulge from heel to flap

And your rifle that is most as big as you.

You were made for love and laughter, for good wine and merry song,

Now your sunlit world has sadly gone astray,
And the road today you travel stretches rough and red and long,

Yet you make it, petit soldat, brave and gay.

Though you live within the shadow, fagged and hungry half the while,

And your days and nights are racking in the line,
There is nothing under heaven that can take away your
smile,

Oh, so wistful, and so patient and so fine.

You are tender as a woman with the tiny ones who crowd
To upraise their lips and for your kisses pout, Still, we'd hate to have to face you when the bugle's sounding loud

And your slim, steel sweetheart Rosalie is out.

You're devoted to mustaches which you twirl with such an air

O'er a cigarette with nigh an inch to run,
And quite often you are noticed in a beard that's full of hair,

But that heart of yours is always twenty-one.
No, you do not "parlee English," and you find it very hard,
For you want to chum with us and words you lack;
So you pat us on the shoulder and say, "Nous sommes camarades."

We are that, my poilu pal, to hell and back!

AUSTRALIA'S MEN

DOROTHEA MACKELLAR

Miss Mackellar is the daughter of Sir Charles Mackellar, Chairman of the Bank of New South Wales. Acknowledgment is due Dr. George Cooke-Adams, formerly an officer in the Australian naval forces, through whose courtesy her verses are presented here.

THERE are some that go for love of a fight
And some for love of a land,
And some for a dream of the world set free
Which they barely understand.

A dream of the world set free from Hate—
But splendidly, one and all,
Danger they drink as 'twere wine of Life
And jest as they reel and fall.

Clean aims, rare faculties, strength and youth,
They have poured them freely forth
For the sake of the sun-steeped land they left
And the far green isle in the north.

What can we do to be worthy of them,
Now hearts are breaking for pride?
Give comfort at least to the wounded men
And the kin of the man that died.

TANKS

O. C. A. CHILD

YES, back at home I used to drive a tram;
 And Sammy, there, he was a driver, too—
 He used to ride his racer—did Sir Sam;
 While pokey London streets was all I knew.

But now, His Nibs and I, of equal rank,
 Are chummy as the paper and the wall,
 Each tooling of a caterpillar tank,
 Each waiting on the blest old bugle call.

Say! Tanks are sport—when you get used to them,
 They're like a blooming railroad, self-contained;
 They lay their tracks, as you might say—pro tem,
 And pick 'em up, and there's good distance gained.

They roar across rough country like a gale,
 They lean against a house and push it down,
 They're like a baby fortress under sail,
 And antic as a three-ring circus clown.

Sam says they're slow. They may seem so to him—
 They can't show fancy mile-a-minute stuff,
 But when they charge, in armored fighting trim,
 You bet the Germans find 'em fast enough!

Now Sam and I are waiting, side by side,
 To steam across yon farm-land in the night;
 We'll take their blamed barbed wire in our stride,
 And stamp a German trench line out of sight.

A HYMN OF FREEDOM

MARY PERRY KING
IN COLLIER'S WEEKLY

Permission to reproduce in this book

UNFURL the flag of Freedom,
Fling far the bugle blast!
There comes a sound of marching
From out the mighty past.
Let every peak and valley
Take up the valiant cry:
Where, beautiful as morning,
Our banner cuts the sky.

Free born to peace and justice,
We stand to guard and save
The liberty of manhood,
The faith our fathers gave.
Then soar aloft, Old Glory,
And tell the waiting breeze
No law but Right and Mercy
Shall rule the Seven Seas.

No hate is in our anger,
No vengeance in our wrath,
We hold the line of freedom
Across the tyrant's path.
Where'er oppression vaunteth
We loose the sword once more
To stay the feet of conquest,
And pray an end of war.

SWAN SONGS

MORE than all the others put together, the war poems of Alan Seeger, Lieutenant Colonel McCrae, and Lieut. Rupert Brooke, have touched and thrilled the heart of America. They are quiet, earnest, yet more powerful than trumpet blasts, for they rise triumphant from great depths, and as they sing, exalt.

Most familiar is our own Alan Seeger's "I Have a Rendezvous with Death." He was studying in Paris when the war broke out. In the third week he enlisted in the Foreign Legion. Two arduous years later he was called on higher service. July 4, 1916, his squad was caught in an assault on the village of Belloy-en-Santerre, where the Germans received them with the fire of six machine guns. Seeger was severely wounded, but went forward with the others, and helped take the place. Next morning he died. He had kept the tryst.

Alan Seeger was a New York boy. He was born in that city June 22, 1888. In his short life he had written some twenty poems. This was his last. It was written in camp, shortly before his call came:

I HAVE A RENDEZVOUS WITH DEATH*

I HAVE a rendezvous with Death
 At some disputed barricade
 When Spring comes back with rustling shade
 And apple blossoms fill the air.
 I have a rendezvous with Death
 When Spring brings back blue days and fair

*From "Poems," by Alan Seeger. Copyright, 1916, by Charles Scribner's Sons, Publishers, New York. Permission to reproduce in this book

It may be he shall take my hand
And lead me into his dark land
And close my eyes and quench my breath;
It may be I shall pass him, still,
I have a rendezvous with Death
On some scarred slope of battered hill,
When Spring comes round again this year
And the first meadow flowers appear.

God knows 'twere better to be deep
Pillowed in silk and scented down,
Where love throbs out in blissful sleep,
Pulse nigh to pulse, and breath to breath,
Where hushed awakenings are dear.
But I've a rendezvous with Death
At midnight in some flaming town,
When Spring trips north again this year,
And I to my pledged word am true.
I shall not fail that rendezvous.

Lieut. Col. John McCrae was a Canadian physician who served in the South African war as an artilleryman. He was on his way to Canada when the war began in 1914, and immediately upon landing he entered the Val Cartier training camp and was commissioned a Captain. Later he joined the McGill Hospital corps and went with it to France, where he rose to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and died in service, January 28, 1918.

His poem, "In Flanders' Fields," was written on the Flanders front in the Spring of 1915. Its inspiration is thus explained by Sergeant Charles E. Bisset, of the 19th Battalion, 1st Brigade, Canadian Infantry:

“On the Flanders front in the early Spring of 1915, when the war had settled down to trench fighting, two of the most noticeable features of the field were, first, the luxuriant growth of red poppies appearing among the graves of the fallen soldiers, and second, that only one species of bird—the larks—remained on the field during the fighting. As soon as the cannonading ceased, they would rise in the air, singing.”

IN FLANDERS' FIELDS

IN Flanders' fields the poppies blow
 Between the crosses, row on row,
 That mark our place, and in the sky
 The larks, still bravely singing, fly
 Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead! Short days ago
 We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
 Loved and were loved, and now we lie
 In Flanders' fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe!
 To you from failing hands we throw
 The Torch. Be yours to hold it high!
 If ye break faith with us who die
 We shall not sleep, though poppies grow,
 In Flanders' fields.

Rupert Brooke, a brilliant, impassioned young Englishman, was one of the first to take arms when Great Britain went to war. He died in the Dardanelles expedition, April 23, 1915. A few days before, he had sent from the Ægean Sea to the English-speaking peoples the poem by which he is best known:

THE SOLDIER*

IF I should die, think only this of me:
 That there's some corner of a foreign field
 That is for ever England. There shall be
 In that rich earth a richer dust concealed,
 A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
 Gave once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
 A body of England's breathing English air,
 Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home.
 And think, this heart, all evil shed away,
 A pulse in the eternal mind, no less
 Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given;
 Her sights and sounds; dreams happy as her day;
 And laughter, learnt of friends; and gentleness,
 In hearts at peace, under an English heaven.

Lieutenant Brooke was a rare poet, having a serene faith, a knowledge of life as continuous. His bent of thought, the manner of his feeling, shine most clearly in this sonnet:

NOT WITH VAIN TEARS

NOT with vain tears, when we're beyond the sun,
 We'll beat on the substantial doors, nor tread
 Those dusty highroads of the aimless dead,
 Plaintive for Earth; but rather turn and run Down some close-covered byway of the air,

*"The Soldier," and "Not With Vain Tears" are from "The Collected Poems of Rupert Brooke," published and copyright, 1915, by John Lane Company, New York. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

Some low, sweet alley between wind and wind,
 Stoop under faint gleams, thread the shadows, find
 Some whispering, ghost-forgotten nook, and there
 Spend in pure converse our eternal day;
 Think each in each, immediately wise;
 Learn all we lacked before; hear, know and say
 What this tumultuous body now denies;
 And feel, who have laid our groping hands away;
 And see, no longer blinded by our eyes.

All of Rupert Brooke's work has been collected and issued, a rich though slender sheaf. The book is fervently commended to people whose own souls are in the key that responds to notes so spiritually fine and clear as those he sounds in all his lines.

"But a Short Time to Live" was written by Serg't Leslie Coulson, whose "little hour" came to an end at Arras, in France, October 7, 1916:

BUT A SHORT TIME TO LIVE

OUR little hour—how swift it flies—
 When poppies flare and lilies smile;
 How soon the fleeting minute dies,
 Leaving us but a little while
 To dream our dreams, to sing our song,
 To pick the fruit, to pluck the flower.
 The gods—they do not give us long—
 One little hour.

Our little hour—how soon it dies;
 How short a time to tell our beads,

To chant our feeble litanies,
 To think sweet thoughts, to do good deeds.
 The altar lights grow pale and dim,
 The bells hang silent in the tower—
 So passes with the dying hymn
 Our little hour.

These songs, with others that have lilted so bravely, so gravely, through the world's most bitter years of travail, will live long in literature, with many more as strong or as sweet. Had all the writers lived, we would have had a wealth of splendid gifts from them, especially, maybe, from that "poor bird-hearted singer of a day," Francis Ledwidge, who fell in battle in Flanders, July 31, 1917. Ledwidge was discovered by Lord Dunsany, himself a soldier-poet and a patron of poets. He was lance corporal in Lord Dunsany's company in the 5th Battalion of the Royal Inniskillen Fusileers. He wrote quite touchingly to a friend shortly before the end, "I mean to do something great if I am spared, but out here one may at any moment be hurled out of life." There is no doubt he would have done "something great," for here is a swan song not unworthy to bear his name to later times:

THE LOST ONES

SOMEWHERE is music from the linnets' bills,
 And through the sunny flowers the bee wings drone,
 And white bells of convolvulus on hills
 Of quiet May make silent ringing blown
 Hither and thither by the wind of showers,
 And somewhere all the wandering birds have flown;

And the brown breath of Autumn chills the flowers.
But where are all the loves of long ago?

O little twilight ship blown up the tide,
Where are the faces laughing in the glow
Of morning years, the lost ones scattered wide?
Give me your hand, O brother; let us go
Crying about the dark for those who died.

THE FLAG SPEAKS

WALTER E. PECK
IN THE HAMILTON LITERARY MAGAZINE

RIBBONS of white in the flag of our land,
Say, shall we live in fear?
Speak! For I wait for the word from your lips
Wet with the brine of the sea-going ships;
Speak! Shall we cringe 'neath an Attila's whips?
Speak! For I wait to hear!

"This is our word," said the ribbons of white;
"This is the course to steer—
Peace is our haven for foul or for fair—
Won as a maiden and kept as an heir,
Peace with the sunlight of God on her hair,
Peace, with an honor clear!"

Ribbons of red in the flag of our land,
Bought for a price full dear,
Speak! For 'tis Man that is asking Man,
Churl in the centuries' caravan,
Speak! For he waits for your bold "I can!"
Speak! For he waits to hear!

"This is our word," said the ribbons of red,
 Slowly, with gaze austere,
 "War if we must in humanity's name,
 Shielding a sister from sorrow and shame;
 War upon beasts with the sword and with flame!
 War—till the Judge appear!"

Stars in a field of the sky's own blue,
 Light of a midnight year,
 Speak! For the spirit of Man awakes,
 Shoulders the cross, and his couch forsakes,
 Whispers a prayer, and the long way takes,
 Speak! For he waits to hear!

"This is our word," said a star of white,
 Set in the silken mere,
 "Right against Might on the land, on the sea!
 Little and Great are the same to me!
 Only for Truth and for Liberty Strike! For the hour is here!"

THE CALL

(FRANCE, AUGUST 1ST, 1914)

ROBERT W. SERVICE

From "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man," a book of fine poems by Mr. Service. Published and copyright, 1916, by Barse & Hopkins, New York. Special permission to insert in this book.

FAR and near, high and clear,
 Hark to the call of War!
 Over the gorse and the golden dells,
 Ringing and swinging of clamorous bells,
 Praying and saying of wild farewells:
 War! War! War!

High and low, all must go:
 Hark to the shout of War!
 Leave to the women the harvest yield;
 Gird ye, men, for the sinister field;
 A sabre instead of a scythe to wield.
 War! Red war!

Rich and poor, lord and boor,
 Hark to the blast of War!
 Tinker and tailor and millionaire,
 Actor in triumph and priest in prayer,
 Comrades now in the hell out there,
 Sweep to the fire of War!

Prince and page, sot and sage,
 Hark to the roar of War!
 Poet, professor and circus clown,
 Chimney-sweeper and fop o' the town,
 Into the pot and be melted down
 Into the pot of War!

Women all, hear the call,
 The pitiless call of War!
 Look your last on your dearest ones,
 Brothers and husbands, fathers, sons:
 Swift they go to the ravenous guns,
 The gluttonous guns of War!

Everywhere thrill the air
 The maniac bells of War!
 There will be little of sleeping tonight;
 There will be wailing and weeping tonight;
 Death's red sickle is reaping tonight:
 War! War! War!

THE CRUTCHES' TUNE

ELIZABETH R. STONER
IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

DOWN the street, with a lilting swing,
Each so bright that never a thing
Seemed to harass, so proud were they;
One leg gone, but their hearts were gay.

Clickety clack, went the crutches' tune.
God! How can they be brave so soon!
Brave, when I can not keep back the tears,
Thinking ahead of the crippled years.

With a rhythmic swing they passed me by,
And although, at first, I wanted to cry,
I didn't, because on each smiling face
Was the peace of God and the pride of race.

And the splendid pair, each with one leg gone,
Swung out of sight to the crutches' song.
And I thought I would give all my future joys
To feel just like those Canadian boys.

All night long, like an ancient rune,
Rang through my dreams the crutches' tune.
I shall never forget, though I'm old and gray,
The song that the crutches sang that day.

THE ANXIOUS DEAD

LIEUT. COL. JOHN McCRAE

IN THE LONDON SPECTATOR

O GUNS, fall silent till the dead men hear
Above their heads the legions pressing on!
(These fought their fight in time of bitter fear
And died not knowing how the day had gone.)

O flashing muzzles, pause and let them see
The coming dawn that streaks the sky afar!
Then let your mighty chorus witness be
To them, and Cæsar, that we still make war.

Tell them, O guns, that we have heard their call;
That we have sworn and will not turn aside;
That we will onward till we win or fall;
That we will keep the faith for which they died.

Bid them be patient, and some day, anon,
They shall feel earth enwrapt in silence deep—
Shall greet in wonderment the quiet dawn,
And in content may turn them to their sleep.

HOME

REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

From Mr. Kauffman's book of poems, "Little Old Belgium."
Henry Altemus Company, Publishers, Philadelphia. Copyright, 1914.
Reproduced in this book by special permission.

At a pillaged hamlet near Termonde, I asked a dying peasant woman into which of the houses still standing I should assist her—which was her home? She pressed a withered hand to her bayonet-pierced side and answered: "The Germans have taken one home from me; but, without knowing it, they have given me another. I am going there now."

MY house that I so soon shall own
Is builded in a silent place,
Not unaccompanied or alone,
But shared by almost all my race;
No landscape from its windows rolls
A picture of the earth's increase;
But, oh, for all our stricken souls,
Within its sturdy walls is—Peace.

The other house I used to love
Before they burnt it overhead;
My slaughtered man; the memory of
Our daughter screaming in the red
Embrace of Uhlans at my door,
Her shrieks all silenced by their shout
Of drunken fury—that was war,
And my new home will shut it out.

I shall not see the German hands
That tear the baby from the breast;
I shall not hear the plundering bands
Laughing at murder: I shall rest.
There Joy shall never riot in
Nor robber sorrow find his way;

Those shutters bar the call of Sin,
And Duty has no debt to pay.

So much I shall be heedless of,
Serene, secure, dispassionate;
There is not anything to love;
There is not anything to hate.
So in my house I shall forget
All of the orgies and the strife,
And find, past memory and regret,
The Resurrection and the Life.

TO HAPPIER DAYS

MABEL McELLIOTT
IN THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE

AGAINST the shabby house I pass each day
(The town is strange, and all so new to see)
Pink hollyhocks made friendly sport of me,
With nod and smile and endless courtesy
Enlive the lonely sameness of my way.
Slim little maids in rosy morning frocks,
They make a splash of color on the gray—
The sun so bright—a pity not to play,
But this old world is sadly work-a-day,
And I must hasten on, my hollyhocks!

I like to think that somewhere, overseas,
Perhaps in some neglected garden place,
Shy flowers from home lean out with wayward grace—
Blue iris and the valley lilies' lace—
Reminding them of happier times than these, . . .
Of happy times that are so soon to be,
When they come marching home to us—our men—
The world's work done, the land made clean again!

YOUR LAD, AND MY LAD

RANDALL PARRISH
IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

DOWN toward the deep-blue water, marching to throb of drum,
From city street and country lane the lines of khaki come;
The rumbling guns, the sturdy tread, are full of grim appeal,
While rays of western sunshine flash back from burnished
steel.
With eager eyes and cheeks aflame the serried ranks advance;
And your dear lad, and my dear lad, are on their way to France.

A sob clings choking in the throat, as file on file sweep by,
Between those cheering multitudes, to where the great ships lie;
The batteries halt, the columns wheel, to clear-toned bugle-call.
With shoulders squared and faces front they stand a khaki wall.
Tears shine on every watcher's cheek, love speaks in every glance;
For your dear lad, and my dear lad, are on their way to France.

Before them, through a mist of years, in soldier buff or blue,
Brave comrades from a thousand fields watch now in proud review;
The same old Flag, the same old Faith,—the Freedom of the World—

Spells Duty in those flapping folds above long ranks unfurled.
 Strong are the hearts which bear along Democracy's advance,
 As your dear lad, and my dear lad, go on their way to France.

The word rings out; a million feet tramp forward on the road,
 Along that path of sacrifice o'er which their fathers strode.
 With eager eyes and cheeks aflame, with cheers on smiling lips,
 These fighting men of '17 move onward to their ships.
 Nor even love may hold them back, nor halt that stern advance,
 As your dear lad, and my dear lad, go on their way to France.

"AS SHE IS SPOKE"

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT

I'VE heard a half a dozen times
 Folks call it Reims.
 That isn't right, though, so it seems,
 Perhaps it's Reims.
 Poor city ruined now by flames—
 Can it be Reims?—
 That once was one of France's gems—
 More likely Reims.
 I'll get it right sometime, perchance;
 I'm told it's Reims.

THE SPIRES OF OXFORD

(SEEN FROM THE TRAIN)

WINIFRED M. LETTS

From "The Spires of Oxford and Other Poems," by Winifred M. Letts, published and copyright, 1917, by E. P. Dutton & Company, New York. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

I SAW the spires of Oxford
 As I was passing by,
 The gray spires of Oxford
 Against a pearl-gray sky.
 My heart was with the Oxford men
 Who went abroad to die.

The years go fast in Oxford,
 The golden years and gay,
 The hoary colleges look down
 On careless boys at play.
 But when the bugles sounded—War!
 They put their games away.

They left the peaceful river,
 The cricket field, the quad,
 The shaven lawns of Oxford
 To seek a bloody sod—
 They gave their merry youth away
 For country and for God.

God rest you, happy gentlemen,
 Who laid your good lives down,
 Who took the khaki and the gun
 Instead of cap and gown.
 God bring you to a fairer place
 Than even Oxford town.

THE GENTLEMEN OF OXFORD

NORAH M. HOLLAND
IN EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD

THE sunny streets of Oxford
Are lying still and bare.
No sound of voice or laughter
Rings through the golden air;
And, chiming from her belfry,
No longer Christchurch calls
The eager, boyish faces
To gather in her halls.

The colleges are empty.
Only the sun and wind
Make merry in the places
The lads have left behind.
But, when the trooping shadows
Have put the day to flight,
The Gentlemen of Oxford
Come homing through the night.

From France they come, and Flanders,
From Mons, and Marne and Aisne;
From Greece and from Gallipoli
They come to her again;
From the North Sea's grey waters,
From many a grave unknown,
The Gentlemen of Oxford
Come back to claim their own.

The dark is full of laughter,
Boy laughter, glad and young.
They tell the old-time stories,
The old-time songs are sung;

They linger in her cloisters,
 They throng her dewy meads,
 Till Isis hears their calling
 And laughs among her reeds.

But, when the east is whitening
 To greet the rising sun,
 And slowly, over Carfax,
 The stars fade, one by one,
 Then, when the dawn-wind whispers
 Along the Isis shore,
 The Gentlemen of Oxford
 Must seek their graves once more.

WITH THE SAME PRIDE

THEODOSIA GARRISON
 IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

ONE star for all she had,
 And in her heart
 One wound—yet is she glad
 For all its smart
 As they are glad who bear
 The pangs of birth
 That a new soul and fair
 May come to earth,
 Seeing she, too, was one
 Who from Death's strife
 Granted her first-born son
 Proudly to Life.
 Now with that very faith
 Life justified,
 She grants a son to Death
 With the same pride.

ACELDAMA

DR. GEORGE F. BUTLER

IN THE SCOOP, THE CHICAGO PRESS CLUB'S MAGAZINE

STILL breaks the Holy morn, to soothe the care
 And labor of the world; hushed is the grove,
 And overhead the vireo's note of love
 Floats like a joyful utterance of prayer.
 Soft insect murmurs fill the enchanted air.
 Into a fairer day earth seems to move,
 And statelier thoughts lift mortal sense above
 Life's sin and pain; the sorrow and despair.
 But hark! where now the noonday beams are shed
 In sorrowing Europe, trembles a sound
 Of thunder, and the land with dews of blood
 Is drenched; while o'er the dying and the dead
 Fate turns to weep o'er every pleading wound—
 Can earth o'ercome the evil with the good?

But yesterday two monarchs, held in check
 Like bloodhounds in the leash, broke forth before
 The eyes of Christendom, and in the roar
 Of lurid conflict heard not the wild shriek
 Of outraged millions—now again the wreck
 Of crushed humanity must strew death's shore
 With ghastly ruin crying evermore,
 "Shame! Wretch of mortal form and vulture's beak—
 To ask God's aid and Christ's! O, hour of woe!
 Cover, O night of ages, the dread birth
 Of man's Imperial hate! Let kings go down
 That peoples may aspire and live and own
 A holier stature, and this crimsoned earth
 Drink the pure light of Freedom's afterglow!"

Sunday in August, 1914

THE LONELY GARDEN

EDGAR A. GUEST

Copyright, 1918, by Edgar A. Guest. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

I WONDER what the trees will say,
 The trees that used to share his play,
 An' knew him as the little lad
 Who used to wander with his dad.
 They've watched him grow from year to year
 Since first the good Lord sent him here;
 This shag-bark hick'ry, many a time,
 The little fellow tried t' climb;
 An' never a spring has come but he
 Has called upon his favorite tree.
 I wonder what they all will say
 When they are told he's marched away.

I wonder what the birds will say,
 The swallow an' the chatterin' jay,
 The robin an' the kildeer, too.
 For every one o' them he knew,
 An' every one o' them knew him,
 Waited each spring t' tell him all
 They'd done and seen since 'way last fall.
 He was the first to greet 'em here
 An' hoppin' there from limb t' limb,
 As they returned from year t' year;
 An' now I wonder what they'll say
 When they are told he's marched away.

I wonder how the roses there
 Will get along without his care,
 An' how the lilac bush will face

The loneliness about th' place,
 For ev'ry spring an' summer he
 Has been the chum o' plant an' tree,
 An' every livin' thing has known
 A comradeship that's finer grown
 By havin' him from year t' year.
 Now very soon they'll all be here,
 An' I'm wonderin' what they'll say
 When they find out he's marched away.

THE BRITISH ARMY OF 1914

ALFRED W. POLLARD
 IN WESTMINSTER GAZETTE

LET us praise God for the Dead: the Dead who died in our cause.
 They went forth a little army: all its men were as true as steel.
 The hordes of the enemy were hurled against them: they fell back, but their hearts failed not.
 They went forward again and held their ground: though their foes were as five to one.
 They gave time for our host to muster: the most of the men who never thought to fight.
 A great host and a mighty: worthy of the men who died to gain them time.
 Let us praise God for these men: let us remember them before Him all our days.
 Let us care for the widows and orphans: and for the men who came home maimed.
 Truly God has been with us: these things were not done without His help.
 O Lord our God, be Thou still our helper: make us worthy of those who died.

MORITURI TE SALUTANT

P. H. B. L.
IN THE LONDON SPECTATOR

IN this last hour, before the bugles blare
The summons of the dawn, we turn again
To you, dear country, you whom unaware,
Through summer years of idle selfishness,
We still have loved—who loved us none the less,
Knowing the destined hour would find us men.

O thrill and laughter of the busy town!
O flower valleys, trees against the skies,
Wild moor and woodland, glade and sweeping down,
O land of our desire! like men asleep
We have let pass the years, nor felt you creep
So close into our hearts' dear sanctities.

So, we are dreamers; but our dreams are cast
Henceforward in a more heroic mold;
We have kept faith with our immortal past.
Knights—we have found the lady of our love;
Minstrels—have heard great harmonies above
The lyrics that enraptured us of old.

The dawn's aglow with luster of the sun
O love, O burning passion, that has made
Our day illustrious till its hours are done—
Fire our dull hearts, that, in our sun's eclipse,
When Death stoops low to kiss us on the lips,
He still may find us singing, unafraid.

One thing we know, that love so greatly spent
Dies not when lovers die: From hand to hand
We pass the torch and perish—well content,
If in dark years to come our countrymen
Feel the divine flame leap in them again,
And so remember us and understand.

"BLIGHTY" AND "GONE WEST"

BRITISH soldiers in France have developed a terminology that is plain to them, but confusing to civilians. They speak of "Blighty," for example, and of "Gone West." These two terms express hopes—Blighty meaning home; in common acceptance, home for rest and recuperation. "Gone West" means gone from the east with its conflict to the refuge of death, where peace waits in the glory of sunset.

"Blighty" is of Hindu origin. British officers in South Africa who had served in India used the word, which is an Anglicized form of the Indian word "vilayti," meaning European. Englishmen being about the only Europeans the natives knew, its application narrowed down to England only; and the army fell into a way of using it as a synonym of home. When the troops from India came into action early in the war, their wounded were sent to the nearest English great hospital, at Brighton, just across the channel. The consonance of Brighton and vilayti or Blighty was so close that these men used their own word as a matter of course, and in this way it floated into general use.

It has acquired a new sense of late. Casualties intermediate to those too severe for removal and those that can be treated in field hospitals, are sent to England—to Blighty—and are themselves called Blighty, meaning wounds that get a man home. Lieut. Siegfried Sassoon has woven the idea into a plaintively whimsical bit of verse which he calls

BLIGHTY

HE woke: the clank and racket of the train
 Kept time with angry throbbings in his brain,
 At last he lifted his bewildered eyes
 And blinked, and rolled them sidelong; hills and skies.

Heavily wooded, hot with August haze,
 And, slipping backward, golden for his gaze,
 Acres of harvest.

Feebly now he drags
 Exhausted ego back from glooms and quags
 And blasting tumult, terror, hurtling glare,
 To calm and brightness, havens of sweet air.

He sighed, confused; then drew a cautious breath;
 This level journeying was no ride through death.
 "If I were dead," he mused, "there'd be no thinking—
 Only some plunging underworld of sinking,
 And hueless, shifting welter where I'd drown."
 Then he remembered that his name was Brown.

But was he back in Blighty? Slow he turned,
 Till in his heart thanksgiving leaped and burned.
 There shone the blue serene, the prosperous land,
 Trees, cows and hedges; skipping these he scanned,
 Large, friendly names that change not with the year,
 Lung Tonic, Mustard, Liver Pills and Beer.

Hugh Pendexter, in Adventure Magazine, says "going west," as used by the men overseas to mean death, is of peculiarly American origin. The Karok Indians of California believed the spirit of the good Karok went to the "happy western land." The Cherokee myths picture the west as the "ghost country," the twilight land where go the dead. The Shawnee tell of the boy who "traveled west" to find his sister in the spirit land. The Chippewa believes the spirit "followed a wide, beaten path toward the west." The spirit world of the Fox Indians is at the setting of the sun. And so on, in the theology of many Indian nations we find the West as the storied abode of the great majority—who have passed over.

The phrase traces back to the Œdipus Tyrannus of Sophocles:

Toward the Western shore
Soul after soul is known to take her flight.

Its later significance is tenderly sung by Eleanor Jewett in The Chicago Tribune:

GOING WEST

WEST to the hills, the long, long trail that strikes
Straight and away into the sunset's glow,
Ribbed by the narrow barriers of Death—
Dark are the waters that beside it flow.
The red flowers fade upon the fields of France,
The soaring larks are fallen to their nest.
The glare of battle soothes a little space. . . .
As they go west. . . .

SPRING

F.M.H.D., F.A.
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

IT'S Spring at home; I know the signs—
The buds are bursting on the vines,
The birds speed high with happier wings,
The heart of youth is glad, and sings.

It's Spring in France; I know the signs—
The massed reserves behind the lines;
The heart of youth burgeons once more
To manhood, and resurgent war!

ON HIS OWN

ADOLPHE E. SMYLLIE
OF THE VIGILANTES

Permission to reproduce in this book

“YOU see that young kid lying there
Playing a game of solitaire?
All shot to pieces in the air;
By Heck, Sarge, he’s a wonder.
The gamest kid I ever met;
They’re probing him for bullets yet,
But s—sh; here comes his nurse Yvette—
Kept him from going under.

You think she’s passing by him? Nit!
D’you get that smile? He waves his mitt;
I think he’s stuck on her a bit.
Can’t blame him for that matter,
She watches him just like a hawk.
Now listen to their daily talk.
She’s all Paree, he’s all New York;
Sit quiet, hear their chatter.”

“Pardonnez-moi, désirez-vous——”
“Oh, fine and dandy! How are you?”
“Quelque chose? Comprenez-vous?——”
“Ah, now I know you’re kiddin’.”
“Vous avez bonne mine aujourd’hui——”
“It’s high time you were nice to me.”
“Time? Je comprends, il est midi——”
“Bright eyes, I think I’m skiddin’.”
“Je crois que je vous donnerai——”
I’ll back up anything you say——”
“Un petit morceau de poulet——”
“You fascinating creature!”

“Avec le crème, dans la coquille,——”

“Rats! There she goes! I always feel
Some blessy’s S. O. S. appeal
Will call off my French teacher.”

The Sarge here nudged my splintered ribs;
“Well, I’ll be damned! Here comes His Nibs!”
And down the aisle stalked General Gibbs
With all the famous aces.

They formed around the sick boy’s bed,
He gasped, saluted, then turned red:
“Looks like I’m pinched!” was all he said,
Scanning their smiling faces.

“So,” spoke the General, “you alone
Brought down three Taubes on your own!
Another Yankee Ace is known
To everyone in Blighty.

I’m proud to know you,—put it there,—
And now we’re going to let you wear
This gallantly won Croix de Guerre
I’m pinning on your nighty.”

THEY SHALL NOT PASS

ALISON BROWN

OF THE VIGILANTES

Permission to reproduce in this book

THEY shall not pass,
While Britain’s sons draw breath,
While strength is theirs to strike with shining sword.
They shall not pass,
Except they pass to Death—
For British fighting men have pledged their word.
They shall not pass—
For France knows no defeat,
Nor hesitates to nobly pay the price.

They shall not pass
 Till brave hearts cease to beat,
 And none shall stand to fall in sacrifice.

They shall not pass—
 America will stand
 As long as lips can answer her, "I come."
 They shall not pass,
 To strike the loved land,
 That freedom's children rise to call their home.

SHIPS THAT SAIL IN THE NIGHT

DYSART McMULLEN

IN MUNSEY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

"Not a light visible. Not a man above the deck."—From a correspondent's description,

HAIL and farewell,
 Ships that pass to the sea!
 Hail and a long farewell,
 Soldiers of destiny!

Not with rolling of drums,
 Not with music and songs,
 Not with laughter and weeping,
 Or cheering of passionate throngs;

But silently, as is fitting,
 Gray ghosts passing from sight;
 Great ships like sea-gulls flitting
 Against the curtain of night.

JOHN DOE—BUCK PRIVATE

ALLAN P. THOMSON
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

WHO was it, picked from civil life
And plunged in deadly, frenzied strife
Against a devil's dreadful might?
Just plain "John Doe—Buck Private."

Who jumped the counter for the trench,
And left fair shores for all the stench
And mud, and death, and bloody drench?
Your simple, plain "Buck Private."

Who, when his nerves were on the hop,
With courage scaled the bloody top?
Who was it made the Fritzies stop?
"J. Doe (no stripes), Buck Private."

Who, underneath his training tan
Is, every single inch, a man!
And, best of all, American?
"John Doe, just plain Buck Private."

Who saw his job and did it well?
Who smiles so bland—yet fights like hell?
Who rang again old Freedom's bell?
'Twas only "Doe—Buck Private."

Who was it lunged, and struck, and tore
His bayonet deep in flesh and gore?
Who was it helped to win the war?
"John Doe (no brains), Buck Private."

Who, heeding not the laurel pile
That scheming other men beguile,
Stands modestly aside the while?
"John Doe (God's kind), Buck Private."

KNITTING SOCKS

The Boston Transcript reprinted the following poem in 1917, just as it appeared in that paper November 27, 1861.

CLICK, click! how the needles go
 Through the busy fingers, to and fro—
 With no bright colors of berlin wool;
 Delicate hands today are full:
 Only a yarn of deep, dull blue,
 Socks for the feet of the brave and true.
 Yet click, click, how the needles go,
 'Tis a power within that nerves them so.
 In the sunny hours of the bright spring day,
 And still in the night time far away.
 Maiden, mother, grandame sit
 Earnest and thoughtful while they knit.
 Many the silent prayers they pray,
 Many the tear drops brushed away.
 While busy on the needles go,
 Widen and narrow, heel and toe.
 The grandame thinks with a thrill of pride
 How her mother knit and spun beside
 For that patriot band in olden days
 Who died the Stars and Stripes to raise—
 Now she in turn knits for the brave
 Who'd die that glorious flag to save.
 She is glad, she says, "the boys" have gone,
 'Tis just as their grandfathers would have done.
 But she heaves a sigh and the tears will start,
 For "the boys" were the pride of grandame's heart.
 The mother's look is calm and high,
 God only hears her soul's deep cry—
 In Freedom's name, at Freedom's call,
 She gave her sons—in them her all.
 The maiden's cheek wears a paler shade,

But the light in her eyes is undismayed.
 Faith and hope give strength to her sight,
 She sees a red dawn after the night.
 Oh, soldiers brave, will it brighten the day,
 And shorten the march on the weary way,
 To know that at home the loving and true
 Are knitting and hoping and praying for you?
 Soft are the voices when speaking your name,
 Proud are their glories when hearing your fame.
 And the gladdest hour in their lives will be
 When they greet you after the victory.

THE GOLDENROD

"ANCHUSA"

FROM B. L. T.'S COLUMN IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

SOME day the fields of Flanders shall bloom in peace
 again,
 Field lilies and the clover spread where once was crimson stain,
 And a new, cheerful golden spray shine through the sun and rain.

The clover's for the English who sleep beneath that sod,
 The lily's for the noble French whose spirits rest with God,
 But where our sacred dead shall sleep must bloom the goldenrod.

For every flower of summer those meadows will have room,
 And yet I think no Flemish hand will touch the kaiser-bloom,
 Whose growing blue must evermore whisper of grief and doom.

But clover for the English shall blossom from the sod,
 And glorious lilies for the French whose spirits rest with God.

And where our own lads lie asleep the prairie goldenrod.

Once more the Flemish children shall laugh through Flemish lanes,

And gather happy garlands through fields of bygone pains,

And, as they run and cull their flowers, sing in their simple strains:

“These clovers are for English who fought to save this sod,

These lilies for the valiant French—may their souls rest in God!

And for the brave Americans we pluck this goldenrod.”

MAGPIES IN PICARDY

“TIPCUCA”

IN THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE

THE magpies in Picardy
 Are more than I can tell.
 They flicker down the dusty roads
 And cast a magic spell
 On the men who march through Picardy,
 Through Picardy to hell.

(The blackbird flies with panic,
 The swallow goes like light,
 The finches move like ladies,
 The owl floats by at night;
 But the great and flashing magpie
 He flies as artists might.)

A magpie in Picardy
 Told me secret things—
 Of the music in white feathers,
 And the sunlight that sings
 And dances in deep shadows—
 He told me with his wings.

(The hawk is cruel and rigid,
 He watches from a height;
 The rook is slow and somber,
 The robin loves to fight;
 But the great and flashing magpie
 He flies as lovers might.)

He told me that in Picardy,
 An age ago or more,
 While all his fathers still were eggs,
 These dusty highways bore
 Brown, singing soldiers marching out
 Through Picardy to war.

He said that still through chaos
 Works on the ancient plan,
 And that two things have altered not
 Since first the world began—
 The beauty of the wild green earth
 And the bravery of man.

(For the sparrow flies unthinking
 And quarrels in his flight.
 The heron trails his legs behind,
 The lark goes out of sight;
 But the great and flashing magpie
 He flies as poets might.)

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, 1918

ALMON HENSLEY
IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

LEAVE me alone here, proudly, with my dead,
Ye mothers of brave sons adventurous;
He who once prayed: "If it be possible
Let this cup pass," will arbitrate for us.
Your boy with iron nerves and careless smile
Marched gaily by and dreamed of glory's goal;
Mine had blanched cheek, straight mouth and close-gripped hands
And prayed that somehow he might save his soul.
I do not grudge your ribbon or your cross,
The price of these my soldier, too, has paid;
I hug a prouder knowledge to my heart,
The mother of the boy who was afraid!

He was a tender child with nerves so keen
They doubled pain and magnified the sad;
He hated cruelty and things obscene
And in all high and holy things was glad.
And so he gave what others could not give,
The one supremest sacrifice he made,
A thing your brave boy could not understand;
He gave his all because he was afraid!

AFTERWARD

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE
IN THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE

THE sick man said: "I pray I shall not die
Before this tumult which now rocks the earth
Shall cease. I dread far journeyings to God
Ere I have heard the final shots of war,
And learned the outcome of this holocaust."

Yet one night, while the guns still roared and flashed,
His spirit left his body; left the earth
Which he had loved in sad, disastrous days,
And sped to heav'n amid the glittering stars
And the white splendor of the quiet moon.

One instant—and a hundred years rushed by!
And he, a new immortal, found his way
Among the great celestial hills of God.
Then suddenly one memory of earth
Flashed like a meteor's flame across his mind.

One instant—and another hundred years!
And even the dream of that poor little place
Which he had known was lost in greater spheres
Through which he whirled; and old remembrances
Were but as flecks of dust blown down the night;
And nothing mattered, save that suns and moons
Swung in the ether for unnumbered worlds
High, high above the pebble of the earth.

THE SONG OF THE GUNS

HERBERT KAUFMAN

From Mr. Kaufman's book of poems, "The Hell Gate of Soissons."
T. Fisher Unwin, Publishers (all rights reserved), London, England.
Special permission to reproduce in this book.

HEAR the guns, hear the guns!
 High above the splutter-sputter
 Of the Maxim, and the stutter
 Of the rifles, hear them shrieking.
 See the searching shells come sneaking,
 Softly speaking,
 Slyly seeking,
 Thirsting, bursting, shrapnel-leaking
 Where the ranks are thickest—tearing
 Mighty gaps among the daring.
 Charging horse and rider stumble,
 And brigades fall in a jumble;
 Earthworks crumble,
 Standards tumble,
 And the driving bayonets fumble,
 But unsated,
 Still the hated
 Cannon thunder, unabated.
 Hear them rumble,
 Hear them grumble,
 Hear the old song of the guns!
 "Send your sons,
 Send your sons,
 All your near ones,
 All your dear ones;
 Give us food!
 Give us food!
 Give the strongest of your brood.
 Let us feed!
 Let us feed!

On the bravest that you breed.
Give us meat,
Give us meat,
Oh, the blood of Valor's sweet!"

And the women make reply:
Ah, the glory of the lie—
"Look, no tear is in our eye.
Rather would we see you die
For your country, than stand by.
Rather would we boast to tell
To your children that you fell,
Than to have you lurk and sell
Honor for a coward's breath;
Better far the soldier's death.
Go and battle for the land.
Make a stand!
Make a stand!
Go and join the dauntless band.
Take a hand!
Take a hand!
Count not us—God will provide!"

Thus the women in their pride
Mask their hearts—their anguish hide.
Thus the mother and the bride
Bid their men to march and ride
To the guns,
Hungry guns,
Rumbling, grumbling for their sons.
Thus the women ever give,
Give their nearest, dearest ones
At the summons of the guns.
What is war to men—they die.
But the widowed women, aye,
To the end alone, must live.

TELLING THE BEES

(AN OLD GLOUCESTERSHIRE SUPERSTITION)

G. E. R.

IN THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE

THEY dug no grave for our soldier lad, who fought and who died out there:
 Bugle and drum for him were dumb, and the padre said
 no prayer;
 The passing bell gave never a peal to warn that a soul was fled,
 And we laid him not in the quiet spot where cluster his kin that are dead.

But I hear a foot on the pathway, above the low hum of the hive,
 That at edge of dark, with the song of the lark, tells that the world is alive:
 The master starts on his errand, his tread is heavy and slow,
 Yet he cannot choose but tell the news—the bees have a right to know.

Bound by the ties of a happier day, they are one with us
 now in our worst;
 On the very morn that my boy was born they were told the tidings the first:
 With what pride they will hear of the end he made, and the ordeal that he trod—
 Of the scream of shell, and the venom of hell, and the flame of the sword of God.

Wise little heralds, tell of my boy; in your golden tabard coats

Tell the bank where he slept, and the stream he leapt, where the spangled lily floats:
 The tree he climbed shall lift her head, and the torrent
 he swam shall thrill,
 And the tempest that bore his shouts before shall cry his message still.

THE RETINUE

KATHARINE LEE BATES
 IN THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

Permission to reproduce in this book

ARCHDUKE FRANCIS FERDINAND, Austrian
 heir-apparent,
 Rideth through the Shadow Land, not a lone knight
 errant,
 But captain of a mighty train, millions upon millions,
 Armies of the battle slain, hordes of dim civilians;

German ghosts who see their works with tortured eyes,
 the sorry
 Spectres of sacred tyrants, Turks hunted by their quarry, Liars, plotters red of hand—like waves of poisonous gases,
 Sweeping through the Shadow Land the host of horror passes;

Spirits bright as broken blades drawn for truth and honor,
 Sons of Belgium, pallid maids, martyrs who have won her
 Love eternal, bleeding breasts of the French defiance,
 Russians on enraptured quests, Freedom's proud alliance.

Through that hollow hush of doom, vast, unvisioned regions,
 Led by Kitchener of Khartum, march the English
 legions:
 Kilt and shamrock, maple leaf, dreaming Hindu faces,
 Brows of glory, eyes of grief, arms of lost embraces.

Like a moaning tide of woe, midst those pale battalions
 From the Danube and the Po, Arabs and Australians,
 Pours a ghastly multitude that breaks the heart of pity,
 Wreckage of some shell-bestrewed waste that was a city;
 Flocking from the murderous seas, from the famished lowland,
 From the blazing villages of Serbia and Poland,
 Woman phantoms, baby wraiths, trampled by war's blindness,
 Horses, dogs, that put their faiths in human loving kindness.

Tamburlane, Napoleon, envious Alexander
 Peer in wonder at the wan, tragical commander, Archduke Francis Ferdinand—when shall his train be ended?—
 Of all the lords of Shadow Land most royally attended!

VIVE LA FRANCE!

CHARLOTTE HOLMES CRAWFORD

By permission: From Scribner's Magazine, copyright, 1916, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

FRANCELINE rose in the dawning gray,
 And her heart would dance though she knelt to pray,
 For her man Michel had holiday,
 Fighting for France.

She offered her prayer by the cradle-side,
 And with baby palms folded in hers she cried:
 "If I have but one prayer, dear, crucified
 Christ—save France!

"But if I have two, then, by Mary's grace,
 Carry me safe to the meeting place,
 Let me look once again on my dear love's face,
 Save him for France!"

She crooned to her boy: "Oh, how glad he'll be,
 Little three-months old, to set eyes on thee!
 For 'Rather than gold, would I give,' wrote he,
 'A son to France.'

"Come, now, be good, little stray sauterelle,
 For we're going by-by to thy papa Michel,
 But I'll not say where for fear thou wilt tell,
 Little pigeon of France!

"Six days' leave and a year between!
 But what would you have? In six days clean,
 Heaven was made," said Franceline,
 "Heaven and France."

She came to the town of the nameless name,
To the marching troops in the street she came,
And she held high her boy like a taper flame
 Burning for France.

Fresh from the trenches and gray with grime,
Silent they march like a pantomime;
“But what need of music? My heart beats time—
 Vive la France!”

His regiment comes. Oh, then where is he?
“There is dust in my eyes, for I cannot see,—
Is that my Michel to the right of thee,
 Soldier of France?”

Then out of the ranks a comrade fell—
“Yesterday—’twas a splinter of shell—
And he whispered thy name, did poor Michel, Dying for France.”

The tread of the troops on the pavement throbbed
Like a woman’s heart of its last joy robbed,
As she lifted her boy to the flag, and sobbed
 “Vive la France!”

THE WOES OF A ROOKIE

WILLIAM L. COLESTOCK .

I ENLISTED in the infantry last summer;
 I was greeted at the training camp with joy;
 I had hardly gotten settled, when a sergeant
 Told me I was now the Company's errand boy.
 Now, I knew I'd have to start in at the bottom,
 And acquire my army training bit by bit;
 But to be assigned to duties quite so humble,
 Was humiliating, surely you'll admit.

My first errand was a trip to Field Headquarters.
 It was raining and the mud was deep and thick.
 I was ordered to seek out the Major General,
 And procure a requisition for a brick.
 'Twas explained to me, before I left my Company,
 That our Captain suffered much with chilly feet,
 And that bricks, when rightly heated, would correct this.
 What that Major General said, I'll not repeat.

To our surly Regimental Quartermaster,
 I was sent to get the Company's Sunday hats,
 And my Sergeant said, "to save myself some walking,"
 I could "also get the First Lieutenant's spats";
 When I told that sour Quartermaster's seageant
 What it was I'd like to have for Company A, Gosh, he "bawled me out," said "Your ears should be longer,
 And your rations should be changed from beans to hay."

For a thousand feet of skirmish line I hunted
 For a half a day, before I saw the joke;

Next they sent me for a left-hand canvas stretcher,
 To repair the Mess-hall windows, which were broke.
 As the Company Street was slightly rough and bumpy,
 They dispatched me for a double-jointed plow;
 And one breakfast-time they sent me to the Colonel,
 With a pail, to milk the Regimental cow.

Then one day the Sergeant said, "You've been promoted.
 You're now morning call-boy for the Regiment,
 And each morning, bright and early, you will sprinkle Drops of water on each face, in every tent."
 In the morning I began my sprinkling duties,
 And had sprinkled in about one dozen tents,
 When a bunch of fellows rushed me to the hydrant,
 Where they "soused" me good; since then I've had some sense.

As I look back at the time I "ran the paddles,"
 After having set me down in water wet;
 Rushing down between two rows of husky messmates,
 With my arms above my head, I feel it yet.
 Now, I've graduated from the rookie section,
 And the "awkward squad" will miss me in its ranks,
 And I'm happy, for a bunch of bloomin' rookies
 Have arrived. To those that sent them, Many Thanks.

IN THE FRONT-LINE DESKS

LIEUT. ELMER FRANKLIN POWELL
IN ADVENTURE MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

I TRIED to be a doughboy, but they said my feet were flat

And I'd surely never stand the awful strain.

No chance to even argue that I'd like to bet my hat

I could out walk any tar-heel in the train.

"Awful sorry, but it's useless," was the doctor's mournful wail.

"Your eyesight quite unfits you for the guns."

Uselessly I tried to tell him that at dropping leaden hail

I could surely decimate a pack of Huns.

Then I hoped for aviation, for my nerve is still in place,

But there wasn't even half a chance for that.

A stocky young lieutenant said, "You'll never hold the pace,

For you've got a jumpy eyebrow." Think o' that!

So they went and made me captain in the Quartermaster Corps,

Where I juggle lists of beans the livelong day.

Trying hard to grin and bear it as the boys march off to war

While I sit and figure up their blasted pay.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN WALKS AT MIDNIGHT

(IN SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS)

VACHEL LINDSAY

From Vachel Lindsay's book entitled "The Congo and Other Poems," published and copyright, 1914, by The Macmillan Company, New York. Special permission to insert in this book.

IT is portentous, and a thing of state,
That here at midnight, in our little town
A mourning figure walks, and will not rest,
Near the old court house pacing up and down.

Or by his homestead, or in shadowed yards
He lingers where his children used to play,
Or through the market, on the well-worn stones
He stalks until the dawn-stars burn away.

A bronzed, lank man! His suit of ancient black,
A famous high-top hat and plain worn shawl
Make him the quaint great figure that men love,
The prairie lawyer, master of us all.

He cannot sleep upon his hillside now.
He is among us;—as in times before!
And we who toss and lie awake for long
Breathe deep, and start, to see him pass the door.

His head is bowed. He thinks on men and kings.
Yea, when the sick world cries, how can he sleep?
Too many peasants fight, they know not why,
Too many homesteads in black terror weep.

The sins of all the war-lords burn his heart.
He sees the dreadnaughts scouring every main.
He carries on his shawl-wrapped shoulders now
The bitterness, the folly and the pain.

He cannot rest until a spirit-dawn
 Shall come;—the shining hope of Europe free;
 The League of sober folk, the Workers' Earth
 Bringing long peace to Cornland, Alp and Sea.

It breaks his heart that kings must murder still,
 That all his hours of travail here for men
 Seem yet in vain. And who will bring white peace
 That he may sleep upon his hill again?

THE KINGS

HUGH J. HUGHES
 IN FARM, STOCK AND HOME

THE Kings are dying! In blood and flame
 Their sun is setting to rise no more!
 They have played too long at the ancient game
 Of their bluer blood and the bolted door.

Now the blood of their betters is on their hands—
 The blood of the peasant, the child, the maid;
 And there are no waters in all the lands
 Can bathe them clean of the dark stain laid.

They have sinned in malice and craven fear—
 For the sake of their tinsel have led us on
 To the hate-built trench and the death-drop sheer,
 But the day will come when the Kings are gone.

The Kings are dying! Beat, O drums,
 The world-wide roll of the democrat!
 O bugles, cry out for the day that comes
 When the Kings that were shall be marveled at!

JEAN DESPREZ

ROBERT W. SERVICE

From "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man," by Robert W. Service, published and copyright, 1916, by Barse & Hopkins, New York. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

OH ye whose hearts are resonant, and ring to War's romance,
Hear ye the story of a boy, a peasant boy of France;
A lad uncouth and warped with toil, yet who, when trial came,
Could feel within his soul upleap and soar, the sacred flame;
Could stand upright, and scorn and smite, as only heroes may:
Oh, harken! Let me try to tell the tale of Jean Desprez.

With fire and sword the Teuton horde was ravaging the land,
And there was darkness and despair, grim death on every hand;
Red fields of slaughter sloping down to ruin's black abyss;
The wolves of war ran evil-fanged, and little did they miss.
And on they came with fear and flame, to burn and loot
and slay,
Until they reached the red-roofed croft, the home of Jean Desprez.

"Rout out of the village, one and all!" the Uhlan Captain said.

"Behold! Some hand has fired a shot. My trumpeter is dead.

Now shall they Prussian vengeance know ; now shall they rue the day,
 For by this sacred German slain, ten of these dogs shall pay."

They drove the cowering peasants forth, women and babes and men,
 And from the last, with many a jeer, the Captain chose
 he ten ;

Ten simple peasants, bowed with toil ; they stood, they knew not why
 Against the grey wall of the church, hearing their children cry ;

Hearing their wives and mothers wail, with faces dazed they stood.

A moment only. . . . Ready! Fire! They weltered in their blood.

But there was one who gazed unseen, who heard the frenzied cries,

Who saw these men in sabots fall before their children's eyes ;

A Zouave wounded in a ditch, and knowing death was nigh,

He laughed with joy : "Ah! here is where I settle ere
 I die."

He clutched his rifle once again, and long he aimed and well. . . .

A shot! Beside his victims ten the Uhlan Captain fell.

They dragged the wounded Zouave out ; their rage was like a flame.

With bayonets they pinned him down, until their Major
 came.

A blond, full-blooded man he was, and arrogant of eye.

He stared to see with shattered skull his favorite Captain lie.

“Nay, do not finish him so quick, this foreign swine,” he cried;

“Go nail him to the big church door: he shall be crucified.”

With bayonets through hands and feet they nailed the Zouave there,

And there was anguish in his eyes, and horror in his stare; “Water! A single drop!” he moaned; but how they jeered at him,

And mocked him with an empty cup, and saw his sight grow dim;

And as in agony of death with blood his lips were wet,
The Prussian Major gaily laughed, and lit a cigarette.

But 'mid the white-faced villagers who cowered in horror by,

Was one who saw the woeful sight, who heard the woeful cry:

“Water! One little drop, I beg! For love of Christ who died. . . .”

It was the little Jean Desprez who turned and stole aside;

It was the little barefoot boy who came with cup abrim
And walked up to the dying man, and gave the drink to him.

A roar of rage! They seize the boy; they tear him fast away.

The Prussian Major swings around; no longer is he gay.
His teeth are wolfishly agleam; his face all dark with spite:

“Go, shoot the brat,” he snarls, “that dare defy our Prussian might.

Yet stay! I have another thought. I'll kindly be, and spare.

Quick! give the lad a rifle charged, and set him squarely there,

And bid him shoot, and shoot to kill. Haste! Make him understand

The dying dog he fain would save shall perish by his hand.

And all his kindred they shall see, and all shall curse his name,

Who bought his life at such a cost, the price of death and shame."

They brought the boy, wild-eyed with fear; they made him understand;

They stood him by the dying man, a rifle in his hand.

"Make haste!" said they; "the time is short, and you must kill or die."

The Major puffed his cigarette, amusement in his eye.

And then the dying Zouave heard, and raised his weary head:

"Shoot, son, 'twill be the best for both; shoot swift and straight," he said.

"Fire first and last, and do not flinch; for lost to hope am I;

And I will murmur: Vive la France! and bless you ere I die."

Half-blind with blows the boy stood there; he seemed to swoon and sway;

Then in that moment woke the soul of little Jean Desprez.

He saw the woods go sheening down; the larks were singing clear;

And oh! the scents and sounds of spring, how sweet they were! how dear!

He felt the scent of new-mown hay, a soft breeze fanned his brow;

O God! the paths of peace and toil! How precious were they now!

The summer days and summer ways, how bright with hope and bliss!

The autumn such a dream of gold; and all must end in this:
This shining rifle in his hand, that shambles all around;
The Zouave there with dying glare; the blood upon the ground;

The brutal faces round him ringed, the evil eyes aflame;
That Prussian bully standing by as if he watched a game.
"Make haste and shoot," the Major sneered; a minute more I give;

A minute more to kill your friend, if you yourself would live."

They only saw a barefoot boy, with blanched and twitching face;

They did not see within his eyes the glory of his race;
The glory of a million men who for fair France have died,

The splendor of self-sacrifice that will not be denied.
Yet he was but a peasant lad, and oh! but life was sweet.
"Your minute's nearly gone, my lad," he heard a voice repeat.

"Shoot! Shoot!" the dying Zouave moaned; "Shoot! Shoot!" the soldier said.

Then Jean Desprez reached out and shot . . . the Prussian Major dead!

SUDDENLY ONE DAY

AUTHOR UNKNOWN

FROM THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE

Found in the pocket of Capt. T. P. C. Wilson, a British officer, killed in action.

SUDDENLY one day
The last ill shall fall away.

The last little beastliness that is in our blood
Shall drop from us as the sheath drops from the bud,
And the great spirit of man shall struggle through
And spread huge branches underneath the blue.
In any mirror, be it bright or dim,
Man will see God, staring back at him.

WE'RE MARCHIN' WITH THE COUNTRY

FRANK L. STANTON

IN JOURNAL OF EDUCATION

THE old flag is a-doin' her very level best,
She's a rainbow roun' the country from the rosy east
to the west;
An' the eagle's in the elements with sunshine on his breast,
An' we're marchin' with the country in the mornin'!

We're marchin' to the music that is ringin' far and nigh;
You can hear the hallelujahs as the regiments go by;
We'll live for this old country, or for freedom's cause
we'll die—
We're marchin' with the country in the mornin'!

DO YOUR ALL

EDGAR A. GUEST.

From Mr. Guest's book of war time rhymes, "Over Here." Published and copyright, 1918, by The Reilly & Britton Company, Publishers, Chicago. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

"DO your bit!" How cheap and trite
 Seems that phrase in such a fight!
 "Do your bit!" That cry recall,
 Change it now to "Do your all!"
 Do your all, and then do more;
 Do what you're best fitted for;
 Do your utmost, do and give.
 You have but one life to live.

Do your finest, do your best,
 Don't let up and stop to rest,
 Don't sit back and idly say,
 "I did something yesterday."
 Come on! Here's another hour.
 Give it all you have of power.
 Here's another day that needs
 Everybody's share of deeds.

"Do your bit!" of course, but then
 Do it time and time again;
 Giving, doing, all should be
 Up to full capacity.
 Now's no time to pick and choose.
 We've a war we must not lose.
 Be your duty great or small,
 Do it well and do it all.

Do by careful, patient living,
 Do by cheerful, open giving;
 Do by serving day by day
 At whatever post you may;

Do by sacrificing pleasure,
 Do by scorning hours of leisure.
 Now to God and country give
 Every minute that you live.

FLAG OF THE FREE

FRANCIS T. SMITH.
 IN POPULAR EDUCATOR

FLOAT thou majestically,
 Proudly, triumphantly,
 Ever protectingly,
 Flag of the free.
 No foe our faith shall blight
 In thy unconquered might,
 Emblem of truth and right,
 We bow to thee.

As in grim days of yore—
 Now on a hostile shore,
 Fulfill thy pledge once more,
 Red, white and blue.
 Long as thy stately bars
 And heaven's reflected stars
 Dishonor never mars,
 We will be true.

Prove to the waiting world,
 When free men are assailed,
 Our standard is unfurled
 For justice still.
 Strengthen us lest we fall,
 Inspiring one and all,
 Urging thy righteous call,
 Under God's will.

THE SERVICE FLAG

WILLIAM HERSCHELL
IN THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

Permission to reproduce in this book

DEAR little flag in the window there,
Hung with a tear and a woman's prayer;
Child of Old Glory, born with a star—
Oh, what a wonderful flag you are!

Blue is your star in its field of white,
Dipped in the red that was born of fight;
Born of the blood that our forbears shed
To raise your mother, the Flag, o'erhead.

And now you've come, in this frenzied day,
To speak from a window—to speak and say
"I am the voice of a soldier-son
Gone to be gone till the victory's won.

"I am the flag of the Service, sir;
The flag of his mother—I speak for her
Who stands by my window and waits and fears,
But hides from the others her unwept tears.

"I am the flag of the wives who wait
For the safe return of a martial mate,
A mate gone forth where the war god thrives
To save from sacrifice other men's wives.

"I am the flag of the sweethearts true;
The often unthought of—the sisters, too;
I am the flag of a mother's son
And won't come down till the victory's won!"

Dear little flag in the window there,
 Hung with a tear and a woman's prayer;
 Child of Old Glory, born with a star—
 Oh, what a wonderful flag you are!

A SMALL TOWN SPORT

DAMON RUNYON

IN THE HERALD AND EXAMINER, CHICAGO

In this piece of work Mr. Runyon presents a good specimen of a large class, a young fellow who was going the trifling way to the Everlasting Bonfire when the war caught him up and made a man of him. Thousands of such cases, before the war little better than waste human material, went out to fight, and found themselves, and made good, and came home sobered, serious men, worthy to stand among those to whom the nation's destinies were confided.

SON o' ol' Miz McAuliffe, the widder o' Box-Car
 Jack,

An' ol' time shack on the Santa Fe, who run to Dodge and back.

He was killed in a wreck at La Junta, and he left the wife and boy—

A kid knee-high to a hop-toad, and tagged by the name o'
 Roy.

This Roy was sort o' onery, and he never would go to school.

He spent the most o' childhood days in learnin' the game
 o' pool.

His shoulders grew somewhat rounded, and his chest it grew rather thin—

But, gosh, he grew to a marvel at knockin' them pool balls in!

Pool-shootin' Roy, we called him, and many a night I've set

Watchin' him clean the table, and puffin' his cigaret.

Sleeves rolled up to the elbow, and playin' so ca'm and cool—

If ever a lad was born for a thing, he was born for playin' this pool!

Fifteen balls was a cinch for him—fifteen balls from the break;

One ball loose from the bunch a bit, and the whole darned rack he'd take.

He was great on a combination, and great on a cut-shot,
too—

He'd make those pool balls talk to him when he started handlin' a cue!

And some of us thought he'd be champeen, but every one didn't agree,

For Doctor Wilcox wanted to bet he'd die of the old
T. B.

But the war it settled the question, for the first of our kids to go

Was Pool-Shootin' Roy McAuliffe—our poolrooms suffered a blow.

What is that thing the Frenchmen give to a good game fightin' boy?

Say it again—the Croix de Guerre? Well, that's what they give to Roy.

It seems fifteen Germans were on him, and handlin' him rather mean,

When he got a machine gun to workin' and pocketed the whole fifteen!

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE

LE ROY C. HENDERSON
IN CARTOONS MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

SHE stands alone beside the gate,
Where oft with him she stood before,
And seems to hear his voice relate
Life's sweetest story o'er and o'er;
A hand she feels upon her own,
Unconsciously a tender glance
She gives, then starts and stands alone,
The lover sleeps—Somewhere in France.

She could have kept him if she would—
His heart and soul were all her own—
But true love knew and understood
That Honor is its own true throne;
She heard the bugles' blaring sound
And whispered—"Go and take your chance."
There 'mid the scenes of war he found
Eternal peace—Somewhere in France.

She knows not where that spot may be—
On barren plain, in hidden dell,
On wooded hill, beside the sea—
The lips that would will never tell;
She knows not what his last words were,
The thoughts that come with Death's advance,
And yet, she feels they were of her,
Those last fond thoughts—Somewhere in France.

THE SERVICE FLAG

J. E. EVANS
IN THE SOVEREIGN VISITOR

SAY, pa! What is a service flag?
 I see them everywhere.
 There's little stars sewed on them;
 What are they doing there?
 Sometimes there's lots of little stars,
 And sometimes just a few.
 Poor Widow Jones has only one—
 I saw her crying, too.

My darling boy, those little stars
 Upon a field of white,
 Are emblems of our glorious boys
 Enrolling for the right.
 The border, as you see, is red,
 Which represents their blood;
 The stars are blue, the heavenly hue;
 The white is always good.

Each star you see means some brave boy
 Has left his hearth and home
 And gone to fight for Freedom's cause
 Wherever he may roam.
 So when you see a lot of stars
 Lift up your heart with joy,
 And when you see a single one
 Pray for some mother's boy.

They go away, those gallant lads,
 Across the wreck-strewn sea;
 They go to pledge their country's faith
 For God and liberty.

The Stars and Stripes they bear aloft
 To join the British flag,
 And, with the colors of brave France,
 They mean to end "Der Tag."
 And soon, my boy, that service flag,
 Born in the nation's heart,
 Will show the world that, when unfurled,
 We proudly take our part.

"HEARTS ARE TOUCHING"

POEMS need not be rhymed, nor wrought in verses. This brave and touching one occurred in a letter written by a French schoolgirl:

"It was only a little river; almost a brook; it was called the Yser. One could talk from one side to the other without raising one's voice, and the birds could fly over it with one sweep of their wings. And on the two banks there were millions of men, the one toward the other, eye to eye. But the distance which separated them was greater than the stars in the sky; it was the distance which separates right from injustice.

"The ocean is so vast that the sea gulls do not dare to cross it. During seven days and seven nights the great steamships of America, going at full speed, drive through the deep waters before the lighthouses of France come into view; but from one side to the other, hearts are touching."

MEN OF THE BLOOD AND MIRE

DANIEL M. HENDERSON
IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

WE whom the draft rejected;
 We who stay by the stuff;
 We who measure our manhood
 And find that it isn't enough;
 We who are gray and burdened;
 We whom the trades require—
 Will you permit us to hail you,
 Men of the Blood and Mire?

We of the thundering forum;
 We of the pen and press;
 We who are pouring our utmost
 Into our land's success;
 We of the Cross and Triangle,
 Lofty in deed and desire—
 God, how we shrivel before you,
 Men of the Blood and Mire!

Aye, we are square with conscience—
 We are reservists all;
 Aye, when your ranks are gaping,
 We will fight where you fall;
 Yet, while we wait, your altar
 Flames in the gas and fire—
 We are the shade of your glory,
 Men of the Blood and Mire!

THE SONG OF THE DEAD

J. H. M. ABBOTT
IN THE LONDON OUTLOOK

Large numbers of Australian and New Zealand volunteers are already on the water bound for Vancouver, en route for Europe.—Paragraph of War News, 1915.

OH, Land of Ours, hear the song we make for you—
Land of yellow wattle bloom, land of smiling
Spring—

Hearken to the after words, land of pleasant memories,
Shea-oaks of the shady creeks, hear the song we sing.

For we lie quietly, underneath the lonely hills,

Where the land is silent, where the guns have ceased to boom,

Here we are waiting, and shall wait for Eternity—
Here on the battle-fields, where we found our doom.

Spare not thy pity—Life is strong and fair for you—
City by the waterside, homestead on the plain.

Keep ye remembrance, keep ye a place for us—

So all the bitterness of dying be not vain.

Oh, be ye mindful, mindful of our honor's name;

Oh, be ye careful of the word ye speak in jest—

For we have bled for you; for we have died for you—

Yea, we have given, we have given our best.

Life that we might have lived, love that we might have loved,

Sorrow of all sorrows, we have drunk thy bitter lees.

Speak thou a word to us, here in our narrow beds—

Word of thy mourning lands beyond the Seas.

Lo, we have paid the price, paid the cost of Victory.

Do not forget, when the rest shall homeward come—

Mother of our childhood, sister of our manhood days,
Loved of our heavy hearts, whom we have left alone.

Hark to the guns—pause and turn, and think of us—
Red was our life's blood, and heavy was the cost.
But ye have Nationhood, but ye are a people strong—
Oh, have ye love for the brothers ye have lost?
Oh, by the blue skies, clear beyond the mountain tops,
Oh, by the dear, dun plains where we were bred,—
What be your tokens, tokens that ye grieve for us,
Tokens of your Sorrowing for we that be Dead?

THE REFUGEES

W. G. S.

IN THE LONDON SPECTATOR

PAST the marching men, where the great road runs,
Out of burning Ypres the pale women came:
One was a widow (listen to the guns!)—
She wheeled a heaped-up barrow. One walked lame
And dragged two little children at her side
Tired and coughing with the dust.

The third

Nestled a dead child on her breast and tried
To suckle him. They never spoke a word.

So they came down along the Ypres road.
A soldier stayed his mirth to watch them pass,
Turned and in silence helped them with their load,
And led them to a field and gave them bread.
I saw them hide their faces in the grass
And cry, as women might when Christ was dead.

SONG OF THE WINDS

MARY LANIER MAGRUDER
 IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
 Permission to reproduce in this book

SONG of the west wind whispering—listen
 The murmuring waves of the golden grain;
 The lisp of rivers that ripple and glisten,
 Filled to brim with the night's wild rain,
 Seaward going to come again,
 Pouring the torrents of spring on the acres
 Fallow and fertile. The wide world's bread
 Harvested now by the busy rakers,
 Gleaners afield when the dawn is red;
 Wind of the west, where the leaning sheaves
 Darken the shadows as daylight leaves
 Or heap the granary under the eaves,
 Sing the song to us over and over,
 Happy harvests and multifold,
 Sweeter than breath of thyme or clover,
 Western wind over sheaves of gold!

Wind of the south from the wide prairie,
 Mesquite barren and cactus lean,
 Where the fleet herds browse and the coyote wary Pierces the night with a note too keen;
 And the brown plain's grass grows all between.
 Fields where the wild sage blows and billows,
 Purple waves on a sea of jade;
 And the bending cottonwoods touch the willows,
 And the water holes glimmer in light and shade.
 Then swinging up from a land of drouth,
 And on by the bayous flowing south,

There by the wandering river's mouth,
 White is the sod with the cotton blossom,
 Whiter the lint that has broken its pod
 And lies like snow on the sad earth's bosom,
 Fresh and fair from the hand of God.

Wind of the north from the long lakes sweeping
 Down to the meadows and hills of corn,
 Over the creeks where the perch are leaping,
 And the mill wheels hum at the break of morn;
 Hills where the clover is newly shorn;
 And sharply pungent as old-world gorse is
 The hay that the wagons have hurried home;
 And under the steady feet of the horses
 The furrows grow in the loose black loam.
 And ever the amber tassels seize
 The wings of every riotous breeze
 To fling gonfalons of golden sleaze,
 Silken and soft, to the earth's far borders:
 "August heat but hastens the days
 When the hungry herds and the empty larders
 Shall all be filled with the Indian's maize."

Wind of the east—ah, east wind blowing
 Long, long leagues from a land o'erseas;
 Empty hands that can know no sowing,
 Passionate pleading hands are these—
 Palms outstretched to us over the seas;
 Ah, the heart of France is a thing to cherish!
 But her werewolf, Hunger, cannot be slain
 Till out of our largess, lest she perish,
 We hasten the caravels of blessed grain.

Till the sea-shark's teeth forever are drawn,
 And the dread great guns are stilled at the dawn,
 We must hold high courage and carry on.
 So winds of the north, south, west, your treasure—
 Corn and cattle and golden grain—
 Shall crowd the ships to their fullest measure,
 And the bread thus cast will return again!

“WHAT THINK YE?”

W. A. BRISCOE

IN THE UNITED EMPIRE MAGAZINE

(Journal of the Royal Colonial Institute, London)

WHAT are we fighting for, men of my race,
 And the best of us dying for?
 For wealth—or profit—or power—or fame?
 Or a statesman's lust? or a monarch's name?
 Or for aught that our sons of sons could blame
 Did we throw the dice of war?

Why are ye weeping, sisters of mine,
 With a mien so proud and brave?
 Do ye weep because of the utter woe?
 Are ye proud because ye would have it so,
 Though Fate should have dealt you the final blow
 And there's nothing to mark the grave?

What are we fighting for, women and men,
 And the best of us dying for?
 It was just because we had signed our name,
 And the Briton's creed is to honor the same:
 It was only for that, and our own fair fame
 We took up the gage of war.

THE MAN BEHIND

DOUGLAS MALLOCH
IN THE AMERICAN LUMBERMAN

Permission to reproduce in this book

THE band is on the quarter-deck, the starry flag unfurled;

The air is mad with music and with cheers.

The ship is bringing home to us the homage of the world

And writing new our name upon the years.

Her officer is on the bridge; we greet him with hurrahs;

But some one says, "Not he the glory won;

Not he alone who wears the braid, deserves the loud
applause,

Oh, don't forget the man behind the gun!"

'Tis said that to embattled seas our ship sailed forth at dawn,

Unheeding shot, unheeding hidden mine;

And through the thunders of the fight went steaming bravely on,

The nation's floating fortress on the brine.

And never throbbing engine stopped, nor parted plate or seam

In all that bloody day from sun to sun;

The good ship sang her battle cry in hissing clouds of steam

To cheer anew the man behind the gun.

I look upon her shining bore, her engine's pulsing heart,

I look upon her bulwarks shaped of steel;

I know there is another art, as great as gunner's art,

That makes the world at arms in homage kneel.

This ship, defying shot and shell, defying winds and seas,

Is fruit of honest labor, rightly done;

The man who built the ship, my lads, remember him, for he's

The man behind the man behind the gun!

HERE AT VERDUN

CHESTER M. WRIGHT

I STAND on a peak at Verdun—a scarred, torn peak of hope and death.

Far under my feet run the mystic passages of Fort Souville.

I strain my eyes to look over a great field where men have swayed in the death lock with eternity.

Ahead and to the right and left stretch fifteen kilometres gaping with wounds, each shell hole a pit of death, a hideous mark left by the scourge of despotism.

Ahead is that foul stretch from which came and still come the hordes of tyranny, with breath of poison and sting of contamination.

Behind is ruin. Never was such ruin. A blight, a torture, a world pain, piercing and cruel.

And yet behind is hope. Behind are the legions of liberty, the soldiers of our children's freedom.

Behind are the endless legions, coming, coming, coming. Behind are the veteran legions of France and Britain. Behind are the countless legions of America, coming, coming, coming—a brown ribbon of promise stretching across the sea to the shrine of Liberty!

Here where these jagged slashes in the yellow earth have formed a glorious tomb for three hundred thousand gallant French—here is the testing ground of our destiny. Here they have held for us our heritage! Here they have perished in the eternal splendor of self-sacrifice for us! Here is their borderland—and ours!

Here they have written with their ebbing blood the slogan that has thrilled the world—"They shall not pass!"

The gaunt and sinister craters, one merging into the ragged rim of another, the bits of shell, the battered helmets, broken guns, ill-assorted refuse of combat—each shattered particle a marker for some valiant soul “gone west” in service of humanity.

Here, over this land glorified by a nobility of deed than which there has been no more exalted, must our war be waged. Out of this hallowed ground comes the call of those who have given of their best—the call to our great land for Old Glory’s best!

There will come to us wounds that will rack our bodies and drain the coursing blood of our vibrant veins. There will come to us the aching pain of suffering and loss—here on these red fields of France. But we will save our souls and our nation’s soul! And we will save our heritage and give to the billions of the world the right to theirs.

So the brown ribbon of youth winds across the sea—to Verdun and to the long, thin lines on either side. Here will we prove our right to life and liberty!

Brown ribbon of promise!

Hoping, longing, wounded France!

Brown ribbon of youth and high resolve!

Brown ribbon of Liberty!

Here at Verdun!

THE ANXIOUS ANTHEMIST

GUY FORRESTER LEE

IN THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE

Written when the Allied armies were chasing the Germans across the fields of France and Flanders, in the summer of 1918.

I SIT down to write a poem of our fighting men's renown,

And I scarce get fairly started when they take another town.

A British commentator's praise I versify, and then
A Frenchman up and multiplies the happy words by ten.
The cable service headlines say the Yankees swat the Hun,
But ere I get a jingle framed they've got more on the run.
I'd like to be their Boswell in a khaki-lauding gem,
But darn those doughboys' peppy hides—I can't keep up with them!

It tickles me quite some to hear of how they're spreading
Teuts

Around the landscape, and I'll say their ways and means are beaubs;

The Fritgian din of "Kamerad" is drowning out the shells
As U. S. shockers shock the shockers with their own pet hells.

I want the good work to go on, but I have one request
To make of them before they lay the kaiser out to rest,
And that is this: Don't stop your war; continue till you've won,

But kindly take a lay-off till I get this anthem done!

A RIDE IN FRANCE

"O. C. PLATOON"

IN THE MANCHESTER (ENGLAND) GUARDIAN

TROTTING the roan horse
 Over the meadows,
 Purple of thistles,
 Purple of clover;
 Over the clay-brown path,
 All through the grass-lands,
 Glory of meadow flowers,
 Over! Come over!

.

On to the highway winding o'er the hill,
 White willow-bordered, grassy-banked;
 On through a village ruined and broken.
 Grass grows in the rubble-heaps,
 Poppies fill the courtyards,
 Swallows build in broken walls,
 And everything is still.

.

While at the corner—walk, O horse of mine,
 A Christ hangs from a crucifix beside a broken shrine.

.

On to the path at the side of the white road,
 Cantering, galloping, breasting the rise;
 Any road, every road, each is the right road,
 Facing the east, the sun in my eyes.

.

Trotting the roan horse
 Over the meadows,

Purple of thistles,
 Purple of clover;
 Over the clay-brown path,
 Back through the grass-lands,
 All through the meadow flowers;
 Over! Come over!

THERE WILL BE DREAMS AGAIN

MABEL HILLYER EASTMAN

IN MUNSEY'S MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

THERE will be dreams again! The grass will spread
 Her velvet verdure over earth's torn breast;
 By ragged shard, half-hid, where rust runs red,
 The soaring lark in spring will build her nest.

There will be dreams again! The primrose pale
 Will shelter where the belching guns plowed deep;
 The trees will whisper, and the nightingale
 Chant golden monodies where heroes sleep.

There will be dreams again! The stars look down
 On youthful lovers—oh, first love, how sweet!
 And men will wed, and childish laughter crown
 Life's awe-compelling miracle complete.

There will be dreams again! Oh, thou forlorn
 That crumbling trench or the slow heaving sea
 Hath snatched thy dead—oh, pray thee, do not mourn!
 There will be dreams—thy loved shall come to thee!

THE BOY NEXT DOOR

S. E. KISER

IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

Permission to reproduce in this book

THERE used to be a boy next door
 Whom I often have longed to throttle;
 I've wished 'a thousand times and more
 That he had died while "on the bottle"!
 Oft in the past it has been hard
 For me to check my inclination,
 When he had cluttered up our yard,
 To hand him heavy castigation.

With freckles on his tilted nose
 And ears that far in space protruded,
 He was not one, as heaven knows,
 To whom I in my prayers alluded.
 Derisively he showed his tongue
 And scorned the warnings which I gave him,
 But now I list myself among
 The ones who pray the Lord to save him.

How vividly I can recall
 Him at the window, making faces;
 I used to think that in him all
 The impish traits had lurking places.
 He stole the green fruit from my trees,
 Not caring how it might affect him;
 Today he's fighting overseas,
 And may the God of hosts protect him!

From childhood into youth he passed,
 And then my little garden flourished;
 And still his friendship was not classed
 Among the treasures which I nourished.
 He tortured first a slide trombone,

And next he tried a squeaky fiddle;
 His voice took on a raucous tone
 That used to rasp me down the middle.

How soldierly our lad appeared
 When with his comrades he departed!
 I wonder if he knew I cheered,
 Or guessed that I was heavy-hearted.
 If I have damned him heretofore
 I now retract each foul aspersion;
 God bless the boy who lived next door,
 And used to be my pet aversion!

THE FLAG

EDWARD A. HORTON
 IN POPULAR EDUCATOR

WHY do I love our flag? Ask why
 Flowers love the sunshine. Or, ask why
 The needle turns with eager eye
 Toward the great stars in northern sky.

I love Old Glory, for it waved
 Where loyal hearts the Union saved.
 I love it, since it shelters me
 And all most dear, from sea to sea.
 I love it, for it bravely flies
 In freedom's cause, 'neath foreign skies.

I love it for its blessed cheer,
 Its starry hopes and scorn of fear;
 For good achieved and good to be
 To us and to humanity.

It is the people's banner bright,
 Forever guiding toward the light;
 Foe of the tyrant, friend of right,
 God give it leadership and might!

THE WAR HORSE

LIEUT. L. FLEMING, B. E. F., FRANCE

Shortly after the verses here following were received from France by the American Red Star Animal Relief, Lieutenant Fleming fell in action. His voice, coming to us as from a plane of life where dumb creatures do not suffer, is a call to civilization to do its duty by the animals whose kind were silent heroes of the war.

WHEN the shells are bursting round,
 Making craters in the ground,
 And the rifle fire's something awful cruel,
 When you 'ear them in the night
 (My Gawd! it makes you fight!)
 An' yer thinks of them poor souls agoing 'ome,
 When you 'ear the Sergeant shout
 "Get y'r respirators out,"
 Then you looks and sees a cloud of something white.

The gas is coming on
 An' yer knows before it's gone
 That the 'orse wots with you now won't be by then;
 Yer loves him like yer wife
 An' yer wants to save 'is life,
 But there ain't no respirators, not for them.
 I was standing by 'is side
 On the night my old 'orse died,
 An' I shan't forget 'is looks towards the last.
 'E was choking mighty bad,
 An' 'is eyes was looking mad,
 An' I seed that—'e—was dying—dying fast.

An' I want to tell yer 'ow
 It's the 'orses gets us through,
 For they strains their blooming 'earts out when they're pressed.
 We was galloping like 'ell

When a bullet 'its old Bill,
 I c'd see the blood a-streaming down 'is face.
 It 'ad got 'im in the 'ead,
 But 'e stuck to it and led Till we comes to "Action right,"
 An' then 'e fell.

I 'adn't time to choose
 I 'ad to cut 'im loose,
 For 'e'd done all 'e c'd afore a gun.
 When I looks at 'im again
 'E was out of all 'is pain,
 An' I 'opes 'is soul will rest for wot 'e done.
 If it 'adn't been for Bill
 We should all 'ave been in 'ell,
 For we only got in action just in time.
 Ain't it once occurred to you
 Wot the 'orses there go through?
 They 'elps to win our fight an' does it fine.

When 'is blood is flowing 'ot
 From a wound what 'e's just got
 An' 'is breath is coming 'ard an' short an' thin,
 'E can see the men about,
 Getting water dealed out,
 But not a drop is brought to comfort 'im;
 Tho 'is tongue is parched and dry,
 'E can see the water by,
 But 'is wounds are left to bleed,
 An' 'e can't tell us 'is need,
 So 'e's just got to bear 'is pain—an' think.

There are 'eroes big and small,
 But the biggest of them all
 Is the 'orse wot lays a-dying on the ground.

WORLD SERIES OPENED—BATTER UP!

IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A. E. F., FRANCE

THE outfield is a-creepin' in to catch the kaiser's pop,
And here's a southpaw twirler with a lot of vim and hop!

He's tossed the horsehide far away to plug the hand-grenade;

What matter if on muddy grounds this game of war is played?

He'll last through extra innings and he'll hit as well as pitch;

His smoking Texas leaguers'll make the Fritzie's seek the ditch!

He's just about to groove it toward a ducking Fritzie's bean;

His crossfire is the puzzlingest that ever yet was seen;

His spittle is a deadly thing; his little inshoot curve

Will graze some Heinie's heaving ribs and make him lose his nerve.

Up in the air he never goes; he always cuts the plate,
No matter if the bleachers rise and start "The Hymn of Hate;"

And pacifistic coaching never once has got his goat.

Just watch him heave across the top the latest Yankee note!

The Boches claim the Umpire is a-sidin' with their nine,
But we are not the boobs to fall for such a phony line;
We know the game is fair and square, decisions on the level;

The only boost the kaiser gets is from his pal, The Devil!

The series now is opened, and the band begins to play;
 The batteries are warming up; the crowd shouts, "Hip-Hurray!"

The catcher is a-wingin' 'em to second, third and first,
 And if a Heinie tries to steal, he's sure to get the worst.

So watch the southpaw twirler in his uniform O. D.
 Retire to the players' bench the Boches—one, two, three!
 He'll never walk a bloomin' one, nor let 'em hit it out.
 Just watch him make 'em fan the air and put the Hun to rout!

EDITH CAVELL

McLANDBURGH WILSON

From Miss Wilson's book entitled "The Little Flag On Main Street," published and copyright, 1917, by The Macmillan Company, New York.
 Special permission to insert in this book.

ON law and love and mercy
 Was laid the German curse
 When to her execution
 Was led the British nurse.

In brutal might they thought her
 Of help and friendship shorn;
 John Brown, Jeanne d'Arc, all martyrs,
 Companioned her that morn.

A harmless, tender woman,
 They took her to her doom;
 A dread, resistless spirit
 She rises from the tomb.

Still Germany shall fear her,
 For since that bloody dawn
 Through all the earth that trembles
 Her soul goes marching on!

TO SERVE IS TO GAIN

CHARLES H. MACKINTOSH

IN LOGGING, DULUTH

“HE profits most who serves us best!”
 Let each who labors, lives and dies
 Beneath these star-bespangled skies
 Go write that motto on his breast!

“He profits most”—Here is no call
 To selfish ease or sordid gain;
 Who serves himself will serve in vain;
 Who profits most must serve us all.

And he has most who gives the most,
 Since what is kept can but decay
 —And Death still treads his sleepless way
 Among our myriad human host.

THEY SHALL RETURN

J. LEWIS MILLIGAN

IN THE TORONTO GLOBE

THEY shall return when the wars are over,
 When battles are memories dim and far;
 Where guns now stand shall be corn and clover,
 Flowers shall bloom where the blood-drops are.

They shall return with laughing faces,
 Limbs that are lithe and hearts new-born;
 Yea, we shall see them in old home-places,
 Lovelier yet in the light of morn.

"TO THE IRISH DEAD"

BY ESSEX EVANS

The author of these heart-touching lines is a Queenslander of Welsh derivation. Sir Herbert Warren, K. C. V. O., of the University of Oxford, had this to say of him and of the Toast: "They say that no one but an Irishman understands Ireland, that she will listen to no one but an Irishman. Wales is near to her in geography and in race. I have thought she perhaps might listen to a Welsh voice. She has one today, now whispering, now ringing, across St. George's Channel. Will she heed it? Who knows?"

TIS a green isle set in a silver water,
 A fairy isle where the shamrock grows,
 Land of Legend, the Dream-Queen's daughter—
 Out of the Fairies' hands she rose.
 They touched her harp with a tender sighing,
 A spirit-song from a world afar,
 They touched her heart with a fire undying
 To fight and follow her battle-star.

Too long, too long thro' the grey years growing Feud and faction have swept between
 The thistledown and the red rose blowing,
 And the three-fold leaf of the shamrock green;
 But the seal of blood, ye shall break it never:
 With rifles grounded and bare of head
 We drink to the dead who live forever—
 A silent toast—To the Irish dead!

VISION

DOROTHY PAUL

IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

Permission to reproduce in this book

ABOVE the broken walls the apple boughs
 Are murmurous with bees;
 Again the slumbrous breeze
 Eddies the snow of drifted chestnut flowers,
 And little ruffling winds go silverly
 Along the poplar trees.
 They never speak of it to me,
 My comrades. Awkward-kind
 I hear their voices roughen and grow dumb,
 Remembering I am blind—
 But through the dark, I know—I know the spring has come
 To France!

What matter I'll not see beneath the wheat
 Red poppies burn again;
 The gleam of April rain
 Along the boulevards; the flower girls
 With mignonette and pinks and clematis;
 Not see again the Seine
 Slip under the silver bridges to Rouen?
 Ah, no; nor see
 The pale gold smile of buttercups, that glorifies
 Gray ruins with bravery
 Heartbreaking, valiant—the smile that lights the eyes
 Of France!

For through the sightless mercy of my days
 White visions come to me—
 Beyond the dark I see.
 Not this worn, steadfast France, wan, gallant, spent,
 With eyes burned haggard by the spirit of the Maid
 And Charlotte of Normandy—

But France triumphant, high of heart,
 Smiling through throbbing drums
 On Rheims restored, Nancy, Alsace, Lorraine,
 In that new spring that comes—
 The spring we halt and blind and dead bring back again
 To France!

RAIN ON YOUR OLD TIN HAT

LIEUT. J. H. WICKERSHAM

Written at the battle front in France and sent to his mother, Mrs. W. E. Damon. Lieutenant Wickersham was killed in action
 September 14, 1918.

THE mist hangs low and quiet on a ragged line of hills,

There's a whispering of wind across the flat;
 You'd be feeling kind of lonesome if it wasn't for one thing—

The patter of the raindrops on your old tin hat.

An' you just can't help a-figuring—sitting here alone—

About this war and hero stuff and that,
 And you wonder if they haven't sort of got things
 twisted up,

While the rain keeps up its patter on your old tin hat.

When you step off with the outfit to do your little bit,

You're simply doing what you're s'posed to do—
 And you don't take time to figure what you gain or what you lose,

It's the spirit of the game that brings you through.

But back at home she's waiting, writing cheerful little notes,

And every night she offers up a prayer
And just keeps on a-hoping that her soldier boy is safe—
. The mother of the boy who's over there.

And, fellows, she's the hero of this great big ugly war,
And her prayer is on that wind across the flat;
And don't you reckon maybe it's her tears, and not the
rain,

That's keeping up the patter on your old tin hat?

THE ARMED LINER

H. SMALLEY SARSON
IN THE POETRY REVIEW

The dull gray paint of war
Covering the shining brass and gleaming decks
That once re-echoed to the steps of youth.
That was before
The storms of destiny made ghastly wrecks
Of peace, the Right of Truth.
Impromptu dances, colored lights and laughter,
Lovers watching the phosphorescent waves,
Now gaping guns, a whistling shell; and after
So many wandering graves.

THERE ARE CROCUSES AT NOTTINGHAM

WRITTEN IN THE TRENCHES

Flanders, spring of 1917. Authorship unknown.

OUT here the dogs of war run loose,
 Their whipper-in is Death;
 Across the spoilt and battered fields
 We hear their sobbing breath.
 The fields where grew the living corn
 Are heavy with our dead;
 Yet still the fields at home are green
 And I have heard it said:

That—

There are crocuses at Nottingham!
 Wild crocuses at Nottingham!
 Blue crocuses at Nottingham!
 Though here the grass is red.

There are little girls at Nottingham
 Who do not dread the boche,
 Young girls at school at Nottingham
 (Lord! how I need a wash!)
 There are little boys at Nottingham
 Who never hear a gun;
 There are silly fools at Nottingham
 Who think we're here for fun.

When—

There are crocuses at Nottingham!
 Young crocus buds at Nottingham!
 Thousands of buds at Nottingham
 Ungathered by the Hun.

But here we trample down the grass
 Into a purple slime;
 There lives no tree to give the birds
 House room in pairing time.

We live in holes, like cellar rats,
 But through the noise and smell
 I often see those crocuses
 Of which the people tell.

Why—

There are crocuses at Nottingham!
 Bright crocuses at Nottingham!
 Real crocuses at Nottingham!
 Because we're here in Hell.

THE WAR ROSARY

NELLIE HURST

IN THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE

I KNIT, I knit, I pray, I pray.
 My knitting is my rosary.
 And as I weave the stitches gray,
 I murmur pray'rs continually.
 Gray loop, a sigh, gray knot, a wish,
 Gray row a chain of wistful pray'r,
 For thus to sit and knit and pray—
 This is of war the woman's share.

And so I knit, and thus I pray,
 And keep repeating night and day,
 May God lead safely those dear feet
 That soon shall wear the web of gray.
 Now and again a selfish strain?
 But surely woman heart must yearn,
 And pray sometimes that she may hear
 The footsteps that return.

But if, O God, Not that.

But if it must be sacrifice complete,
 Then I will trust that afterward
 Thou wilt guide home those precious feet.

WHEN PRIVATE MUGRUMS PARLEY VOOS

PVT. CHARLES DIVINE
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES, A.E.F., FRANCE

I CAN count my francs an' santeems—
If I've got a basket near—
An' I speak a wicked "bon jour,"
But the verbs are awful queer,
An' I lose a lot o' pronouns
When I try to talk to you,
For your eyes are so bewitchin'
I forget to parlay voo.

In your pretty little garden,
With the bench beside the wall,
An' the sunshine on the asters,
An' the purple phlox so tall,
I should like to whisper secrets
But my language goes askew—
With the second person plural
For the old familiar "too."

In your pretty little garden
I could always say "juh tame,"
But it ain't so very subtle,
An' it ain't not quite the same
As "You've got some dandy earrings,"
Or "Your eyes are nice an' brown"—
But my adjectives get manly
Right before a lady noun.

Those infinitives perplex me;
I can say you're "tray jolee,"
But beyond that simple statement
All my tenses don't agree.
I can make the Boche "comprenney"
When I meet 'em in a trench,
But the softer things escape me
When I try to yap in French.

In your pretty little garden
 Darn the idioms that dance
 On your tongue so sweet and rapid,
 Ah, they hold me in a trance!
 Though I stutter an' I stammer,
 In your garden, on the bench,
 Yet my heart is writin' poems
 When I talk to you in French.

MULES

C. FOX SMITH
 IN LONDON PUNCH

Reproduced by special permission of the Proprietors of "Punch"

I NEVER would 'ave done it if I'd known what it would be.

I thought it meant promotion and some extra pay for me;
 I thought I'd miss a drill or two with packs an' trenchin'
 tools,
 So I said I'd 'andled horses—an' they set me 'andlin'
 mules.

Now 'orses they are 'orses, but a mule, 'e is a mule (Bit o' devil, bit o' monkey, bit o' bloomin' boundin' fool!)

Oh, I'm usin' all the adjectives I didn't learn at school
 On the prancin', glancin', rag-time dancin' army transport mule.

If I'd been Father Noah when the cargo walked aboard,
 I'd 'ave let the bears an' tigers in, an' never spoke a word;
 But I'd 'ave shoved a placard out to say the 'ouse was full,
 An' shut the ark up suddent when I saw the army mule.

They buck you off when ridden, they squish your leg when led;
 They're mostly sittin' on their tail or standing on their
 'ead;
 They reach their yellow grinders out an' gently chew your ear,
 An' their necks is indiarubber for attackin' in the rear.

They're as mincin' when they're 'appy as a ladies' ridin'
 school,
 But when the fancy takes 'em they're like nothin' but a mule—
 With the off wheels in the gutter an' the near wheels in the air,
 An' a leg across the traces, an' the driver Lord knows where.

They're 'orrid in the stables, they're worse upon the road;
 They'll bolt with any rider, they'll jib with any load;
 But soon we're bound beyond the seas, an' when we cross the foam
 I don't care where we go to if we leaves the mules at 'ome.

For 'orses they are 'orses, but a mule 'e is a mule (Bit o' devil, bit o' monkey, bit o' bloomin' boundin' fool!)
 Oh, I'm usin' all the adjectives I never learnt at school
 On the rampin', rawboned, cast-steel-jawboned army transport mule.

AN APRIL SONG

GEORGE C. MICHAEL, LANCE CORPORAL, R. E.
(Written on leave at Stratford-on-Avon.)

ORCHARD land! Orchard land!
 Damson blossom, primrose bloom:
 Avon, like a silver band
 Winds from Stratford down to Broome:
 All the orchards simmer white
 For an April day's delight:
 We have risen in our might,
 Left this land we love, to fight,
 Fighting still, that these may stand,
 Orchard land! Orchard land!

Running stream! Running stream!
 Ruddy tench and silver perch:
 Shakespeare loved the water's gleam
 - Sparkling on by Welford church:
 Water fay meets woodland gnome
 Where the silver eddies foam
 Thro' the richly scented loam:
 We are fain to see our home,
 See again thy silver gleam,
 Running stream! Running stream!

Silver throats! Silver throats!
 Piping blackbird, trilling thrush:
 Shakespeare heard your merry notes;
 Still you herald morning's blush:
 You shall sing your anthems grand
 When we've finished what He planned.
 God will hear and understand.
 God will give us back our land
 Where the water-lily floats,
 Silver throats! Silver throats!

A SONG OF THE AIR

GORDON ALCHIN

From "Oxford and Flanders." B. H. Blackwell, Publishers, Oxford, England. Special permission to reproduce in this book.

THIS is the song of the Plane—
 The creaking, shrieking plane,
 The throbbing, sobbing plane,
 And the moaning, groaning wires:—
 The engine—missing again!
 One cylinder never fires!
 Hey ho! for the Plane!

This is the song of the Man—
 The driving, striving man,
 The chosen, frozen man:—
 The pilot, the man-at-the-wheel,
 Whose limit is all that he can,
 And beyond, if the need is real!
 Hey ho! for the Man!

This is the song of the Gun—
 The muttering, stuttering gun,
 The maddening, gladdening gun:—
 That chuckles with evil glee
 At the last, long drive of the Hun,
 With its end in eternity!
 Hey ho! for the Gun!

This is the song of the Air—
 The lifting, drifting air,
 The eddying, steadying air,
 The wine of its limitless space:—
 May it nerve us at last to dare
 Even death with undaunted face!
 Hey ho! for the Air!

VICTORY!

S. J. DUNCAN-CLARK

IN THE CHICAGO EVENING POST, NOVEMBER 11, 1918

Permission to reproduce in this book

OUT of the night it leaped the seas—
 The four long years of night!
 "The foe is beaten to his knees,
 And triumph crowns the fight!"
 It sweeps the world from shore to shore,
 By wave and wind 'tis flung,
 It grows into a mighty roar
 Of siren, bell and tongue.
 Where little peoples knelt in fear,
 They stand in joy today;
 The hour of their redemption here,
 Their feet on Freedom's way.
 The kings and kaisers flee their doom,
 Fall bloody crown and throne!
 Room for the people! Room! Make room!
 They march to claim their own!
 Now God be praised we lived to see
 His Sun of Justice rise,
 His Sun of Righteous Liberty,
 To gladden all our skies!
 And God be praised for those who died,
 Whate'er their clime or breed,
 Who, fighting bravely side by side,
 A world from thralldom freed!
 And God be praised for those who, spite
 Of woundings sore and deep,
 Survive to see the Cause of Right
 O'er all its barriers sweep!
 God and the people—This our cry!
 O, God, thy peace we sing!
 The peace that comes through victory,
 And dwells where Thou art King.

THE HOMECOMING

LEROY FOLGE

Grief for a brother, an American who was killed in France, brought about the suicide of the author of this poem. The manuscript was found beside his body. The lines were published in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

HIS regiment came home today,
 But Jim, old Jim, he's still away.
 I know, I know, he's sleeping there
 Out on the fields of France somewhere.
 And yet, I stood out in the rain,
 To watch the boys come home again,
 Just wishing that it wasn't true,
 And that Jim would be coming, too.
 Yet, all the while, I knew, I knew—

Old Jim, he's gone. They tell me how
 He fell against the Huns, and now,
 He's gained a sort of dignity
 That somehow seems could never be;
 For Jim, he was so gay and free,
 With never a thought of greater weight
 Than just to keep an evening date,
 Or get some cigarets, perhaps,
 Or shoot a game or two of craps,
 Or dance all night, then drive all day
 His roadster down the speeding way.
 But, now, Jim's gone, the folks will say,
 He was a wonder in his day.
 Old Jim—he wasn't old, you know—
 I say that for I love him so—
 Grew up with me, and he and I Would never let a day go by
 That I did not see some plan begun
 In which we both would have some fun.

And then, there comes that fateful day,
 When our men go to join the fray;
 And Jim can go, but I must stay.
 "Good-by, old top, if I'm not dead,
 I'll give the Kaiser hell," he said.
 I think he meant it, but—. Oh, well,
 He didn't give the Kaiser hell.

Folks always said that Jim was light,
 And stayed out much too late at night,
 Frivolous and never would,
 Whatever else he did, make good.

Why, no one ever thought to take
 Jim seriously, the reckless rake!
 But when the time to charge had come,
 Jim left the trench, along with some
 More daring chaps, and crawling, spanned
 The hell that they call "No Man's Land."

They cut the tangled wires away,
 Then our men charged, but there Jim lay—
 What is it that the Scriptures say
 About the chap that offers up
 His all, and drinks the bitter cup—
 That's how I like to think of Jim,
 The glory that is left of him.

THE CROWN

HELEN COMBES
 IN LESLIE'S WEEKLY

WRITE us your verse, oh, soldier, tell us the grim,
 red tale,
 Learned on the field of battle, where bullets fell like hail.
 Pen us the ghastly story, of thousands of slaughtered
 men,
 Till our souls are sick with horror. And then, oh, soldier, then,

Tell us in tender accents, how men with hearts of gold Succored their wounded brothers; stripped in the biting cold

To cover the dead and dying. Give us our faith again,
Our belief in a God Almighty, in a Brotherhood of Man.

Paint us a canvas, soldier, a picture of fire and flame!
Men, mad with the lust of killing, playing their grisly game!

Show us the dead-strewn hillsides, guarding the blooddrenched plain,
A picture of war's grim horrors. And then, oh, soldier, then,

Draw us the white-capped nurses, doctors with skilful hands,
Counting their lives as nothing when human need demands

All that they have to offer. Paint us the women and men
Who bring the joy of living back to our hearts again.

Sing us a song, oh, soldier, chant in a martial strain,
Those who have died in battle, those who come home
again.

Call us the mothers of heroes, call us the mothers of men,
Till our hearts are torn and bleeding. And then, oh, soldier, then,

Play us in minor cadence, a harp with a tautened string,
Set to a heavenly music, the songs the angels sing,
Of a world by Love safeguarded, where wars shall ever cease,
Sing us at last oh, soldier, the Song of Eternal Peace.

OUR SOLDIER DEAD

ANNETTE KOHN

IN NEW YORK TIMES

Permission to reproduce in this book

"IN Flanders fields, where poppies blow,"
 In France where beauteous roses grow,
 There let them rest—forever sleep,
 While we eternal vigil keep
 With our heart's love—with our soul's pray'r,
 For all our Fallen "Over There."

The sounding sea between us rolls
 And in perpetual requiem tolls—
 Three thousand miles of cheerless space
 Lie 'twixt us and their resting place;
 'Twas God who took them by the hand
 And left them in the stranger land.

The earth is sacred where they fell—
 Forever on it lies the spell
 Of hero deeds in Freedom's cause,
 And men unborn shall come and pause
 To say a prayer, or bow the head,
 So leave these graves to hold their dead.

Let not our sighing nor our tears
 Fall on them through the coming years
 Who on the land, on sea, in air,
 With dauntless courage everywhere,
 Their homes and country glorified—
 Stood to their arms and smiling died.

Great France will leave no need nor room
 That we place flowers on their tomb—
 And proudly o'er their resting place,
 Will float forever in its grace,
 O'er cross, and star, and symbol tag,
 Their own beloved country's flag.

The morning sun will gild with light,
 The stars keep holy watch at night,
 The winter spread soft pall of snow,
 The summer flowers about them grow,
 The sweet birds sing their springtime call,
 God's love and mercy guard them all.

LET THERE BE LIGHT!

RUTH WRIGHT KAUFFMAN
 IN THE RED CROSS MAGAZINE

Permission to reproduce in this book

BLACK with the blackness of hell and despair
 Village and village and village lay there;
 Never a candle and never a lamp—
 Four hundred miles of the enemies' camp.

Trains of munitions that creak with their loads,
 Supplies, horses, soldiers engulfed by the roads;
 An ambulance crawling, a password, and then
 Through the shell-shattered houses the marching of men.

Black with the blackness of wounds and of death
 The villages huddled there holding their breath;
 Black—till there rang this new order to "Cease"—
 "It is over!—all over!—the war!—there is peace!"

Come, dance on the ruins—Look, No Man's Land there,
 "Verboten" for years, is a world's thoroughfare;
 And village and village, remember the night,
 But turn it to day—and let there be light.

The sorrow unburied, destruction—how much!
 Four hundred long miles for the taper to touch!
 The shades are undrawn, the lamps shining bright;
 It is dawn in the darkness; again There Is Light!

THE PRESENT BATTLE-FIELD

WRIGHT FIELD
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES

THE war is over, over there,
And Peace has made her bow—
But the Battle of Verdun is on
At Jenkins' Corners now!

All's still along the rippling Somme,
Likewise at Belleau Wood—
But the Jenkins' Corners Battle now
Is merely going good!

Now beaten into plowshares are
The swords once dripping wet
With human gore—but Heinies fall
At Jenkins' Corners yet!

The smoke of cannon floats away
In France, a fading cloud—
But the war at Jenkins' Corners is Attracting quite a crowd!

Pop Snider had a navvy there,
And old Zeke Wade a son,
And since the boys are home again,
They've waded in like fun.

The checker-board is moved away,
A gas-mask takes its place;
The floor is neatly sanded, so
The campaign they may trace.

Pop Snider knows what he'd have done,
And Zekiel has his say
On where they made the great mistake
And nearly lost the day.

They fight it o'er from A to Z,
 And slay full many a Hun—
 For out at Jenkins' Corners now
 The war is just begun!

NOVEMBER ELEVENTH

ELIZABETH HANLY
 IN POPULAR EDUCATOR

A THOUSAND whistles break the bonds of sleep
 With swift exultant summons wild and shrill;
 Impassioned tongues of flames toward heaven leap
 To tell us peace has come. The guns are still.

A thousand flags have blossomed in the air
 Like poppies in a garden by the sea.
 Beyond the eastern hills a golden flare
 Foretells the day that broke on Calvary.

Long-darkened Liberty uplifts once more
 Her torch on Belgium, Poland and Alsace
 And Flanders—on each desecrated shore,
 Slow dawns the sun; and on my mother's face
 The look, I think, that Mary must have worn
 In Galilee on Resurrection morn.

OLD JIM

NORMAN SHANNON HALL
IN THE STARS AND STRIPES

Permission to reproduce in this book

OUT in that vague, vast "somewhere" of The Line
They killed Old Jim, a proven friend of mine.
Killed him at night, while he was on patrol;
All the company found was just a hole
A damned boche shell had dug out where he'd gone.
The outfit passed the place just after dawn
And saw some bodies; but they couldn't tell
Which one was which. They all were smashed to hell!
They put Jim on the list, "Reported Dead";
"Missing in Action," the home papers said.

I wasn't in The Line when Jim went out.
A piece of shrapnel had hit me a clout
Which kept me pretty quiet for a while—
Gray days when it was mighty hard to smile.
And when I learned Old Jim had topped the ridge
I fell to thinking what a privilege
It was to know him. Jim was just the kind
That stops to pet a dog or help the blind.
The sort you turn to when things don't go right,
And then forget when all the world is bright.
Jim had a kindly eye that seemed to see
The best in men. What could he see in me?
I never knew; but Jim was always glad
To give me half of everything he had.
That's why, you see, it cut me mighty deep
To know Old Jim was Out There—in a heap.

I've said Old Jim was not identified.
All the outfit ever knew was—he died!
And though there is no way to prove it's so
This Unknown Soldier is Old Jim. I know!
The Congress Medal and the D. S. C.,
Have been given this Lost Identity;
And knowing that they both were earned by him,
I know the Unknown Soldier is—Old Jim!

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER ARMISTICE DAY AT ARLINGTON

GRANTLAND RICE
IN THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE

Permission to reproduce in this book

THE wind to-day is full of ghosts with ghostly bugles blowing,
Where shadows steal across the world, as silent as the dew.
Where golden youth is yellow dust, by haunted rivers flowing Through valleys where the crosses grow, as harvest wheat is growing,
And only dead men see the line that passes in review.

The gripping clay once more gives way before the Mighty Mother
Who waits with everlasting arms to guard her sleeping sons.
And lonely mates in silent fields call out to one another
The story of an empty grave, where each has lost a brother,
Who takes the long, long trail at last beyond the rusting guns.

Gently the east wind brought him home to meet the south wind sighing.
Softly the north wind breathes his name that none of us may know.
For only those who fell with him, out in the darkness lying,
Can tell his company or rank, and they are unreplying,
As each dreams on through summer dawns or winter's mantling snow.

Nameless—and yet how gallantly he faced the roaring thunder

Where names were less than star-dust as the crashing steel swept by
To take its endless toll of those the night squad spaded under,
Clod upon clod, beneath the sod that time alone may
sunder,
Held where the wind-blown grasses stir beneath an alien sky.

He'll miss, perhaps, the poppy blooms that sway above
the clover,

But rose-red wreaths of Arlington bend low above his dreams.

The reveille at dawn is done, the slogging hikes are over,
Where out the friendly lanes of home, a gay and careless rover,

His wild, free spirit seeks the hills and haunts the singing streams.

No more he moves by Meuse or Aisne, some shell-swept river wading,

No marching orders call him from his rough-hewn granite grave.

And when at dusk we hear far off the eerie drum-taps fading,

What hallowed spot holds more than this, with spectral lines parading

Blood of our blood, dust of our dust, "the ashes of our brave"?

There will be tears from watching eyes, where rain and mist are blended,

There will be heartache in the lines where gold-starred mothers wait.

But where the great shells fall no more, what vision is more splendid
 Than peace along the once-scarred fields, the last red battle ended,
 Peace that he helped to bring again above the twilight gate?

Let valor's minstrel voices sing his fame for future pages,
 But when the starless darkness comes and the long silence creeps,
 When blossom mists of spring return or winter torrent
 rages,
 Write this above his nameless dust, to last beyond the ages,
 "Safe in the Mighty Mother's arms an Unknown Soldier sleeps."

EPITAPH FOR THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

ANNETTE KOHN
 IN THE WASHINGTON STAR

Permission to reproduce in this book

WITHIN this nation-hallowed tomb
 An unknown soldier lies asleep,
 Symbolic comrade of all those
 Who, on the land, on sea, in air,
 In that red death across the seas,
 Sealed with their blood the sacred truths
 For which our country ever stands:
 That righteousness is all the law—
 That justice is true government—
 Man's liberty the gift of God.
 In memory of the faith they kept,
 Here through the ages all the land
 As honor guard on watch will stand!

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

Above the broken walls the apple boughs.....	181
Absolute knowledge I have none.....	86
Across the sands by Mary's well.....	47
Against the shabby house I pass each day.....	111
A little grimy-fingered girl.....	43
Archduke Francis Ferdinand, Austrian heir-apparent.....	137
A thousand whistles break the bonds of sleep.....	198
Athwart that land of bloss'ning vine.....	65
Black with the blackness of hell and despair.....	196
Bosun's whistle piping, "Starboard watch is on";.....	18
Boy in khaki, boy in blue.....	82
By all the glories of the day.....	13
By blazing homes, through forests torn.....	70
Click, click! how the needles go.....	128
Come! Says the drum.....	67
Come shake hands, my little peach blossom.....	76
Dear little flag in the window there.....	154
Down in the street, with a lilting swing.....	108
Down toward the deep-blue water, marching to throb of drum	112
"Do your bit!" How cheap and trite.....	152
'E's a sportsman is our Padre.....	36
Far and near, high and clear.....	106
Flag of our Faith: lead on—.....	40
Float thou majestically, proudly, triumphantly.....	153
Franceline rose in the dawning gray.....	139
God, the Master Pilot.....	68
Gone is the spire that slept for centuries.....	92
Hail and farewell.....	126
Hail, banner of our holy faith.....	45
Hear the guns, hear the guns!.....	134

INDEX—Continued

He profits most who serves us best!.....	179
Here in the long white ward I stand.....	14
Here's to the Blue of the wind-swept North.....	41
He was a French Boy Scout—a little lad.....	83
He woke: the clank and racket of the train.....	121
His regiment came home today,.....	192
Ho! Heimdal sounds the Gjallar-horn:.....	21
I can count my francs an' santeems.....	186
I enlisted in the infantry last summer;.....	141
If I should die, think only this of me:.....	102
I have a conversation book; I brought it out from home.....	19
I have a rendezvous with Death.....	99
I hear the throbbing music down the lanes of Afric rain:...	42
I knit, I knit, I pray, I pray.....	185
I never would 'ave done it if I'd known what it would be..	187
In Flanders' fields the poppies blow.....	101
In Flanders fields, where poppies blow.....	195
In this last hour, before the bugles blare.....	120
I saw the spires of Oxford.....	114
I sit down to write a poem of our fighting men's renown....	169
I stand on a peak at Verdun—a scarred, torn peak of hope and death	167
It is long since knighthood was in flower.....	85
It is portentous, and a thing of state.....	144
I tried to be a doughboy, but they said my feet were flat....	143
It's a high-falutin' title they have handed us;.....	44
It's Spring at home; I know the signs—.....	123
It was high midsummer and the sun was shining strong..	34
It was only a little river; almost a brook;.....	159
It was thick with Prussian troopers, it was foul with Ger- man guns	29
I've heard a half a dozen times.....	113
I was an exile from my own country.....	93
I wonder what the trees will say.....	118
Just for a "scrap of paper,".....	24
Leave me alone here, proudly, with my dead.....	132
Left! Left! Had a good girl when I Left! Left.....	71

INDEX—Continued

Let us praise God for the Dead: the Dead who died in our cause	119
'Mid blinding rain this inky night.....	74
Mike Dillon was a doughboy.....	61
My heart is numb with sorrow;.....	51
My house that I so soon shall own.....	110
My name is Danny Bloomer and my age is eighty-three....	75
My son, at last the fateful day has come.....	87
Never a Serbian flower shall bloom.....	50
No beauty could escape his loving eyes,.....	14
No bugle is blown, no roll of drums.....	86
No Man's Land is an eerie sight.....	16
Not with vain tears, when we're beyond the sun.....	102
Now, Mr. Wall of Wall St., he built himself a yacht.....	89
O guns, fall silent till the dead men hear.....	109
Oh, Carranza sent a cable- (on the kaiser's birthday) gram.	176
Oh, Land of Ours, hear the song we make for you—.....	161
Oh, the General with his epaulets, leadin' a parade;.....	37
Oh ye whose hearts are resonant, and ring to War's romance	146
One star for all she had.....	116
On law and love and mercy.....	178
On the battlefields of Flanders men have blessed you in their pain	69
Orchard land! Orchard land!.....	189
Our little hour—how swift it flies—.....	103
Out here the dogs of war run loose....	184
Out in that vague vast "somewhere" of The Line.....	199
Out of the night it leaped the seas.....	191
Outside the ancient city's gate.....	48
Over thousands of miles.....	53
Pardon! he has no Engleesh, heem.....	73
Past the marching men, where the great road runs.....	162
Perched upon an office stool, neatly adding figures.....	94
Poppies in the wheat fields on the pleasant hills of France..	25

INDEX—Continued

Ribbons of white in the flag of our land.....	105
Saint Genevieve, whose sleepless watch.....	20
Say, pa! What is a service flag?.....	158
She stands alone beside the gate.....	157
She wasn't much to brag about, she wasn't much to see....	30
Some day the fields of Flanders shall bloom in peace again.	129
Somewhere is music from the linnets' bills.....	104
Song of the west wind whispering—listen.....	163
Son o' ol' Miz McAuliffe, the widder o' Box-Car Jack.....	155
Standin' up here on the fire-step.....	80
Still breaks the Holy morn, to soothe the care.....	117
Straight thinking, Straight talking.....	57
Suddenly one day the last ill shall fall away.....	151
Summer comes and summer goes.....	72
Thank God, our liberating lance.....	46
The band is on the quarter-deck, the starry flag unfurled;..	166
The Colonel has a job to do.....	32
The dull gray paint of war.....	183
The evening star a child espied.....	81
The herdman wandering by the lonely rills.....	27
The Kid has gone to the Colors.....	23
The Kings are dying! In blood and flame.....	145
The little home paper comes to me.....	15
The magpies in Picardy.....	130
The mist hangs low and quiet on a ragged line of hills....	182
The nightingales of Flanders.....	50
The old flag is a-doin' her very level best.....	151
The Old Gang on the Corner! What an arrant tribe they were	64
The outfield is a-creepin' in to catch the kaiser's pop.....	177
The rivers of France are ten score and twain.....	79
The sick man said: "I pray I shall not die.....	133
The soldier boys are marching, are marching past my door;	78
The star upon their service flag has changed to gleaming gold:	17
The sunny streets of Oxford.....	115
The war is over, over there.....	197
The wind today is full of ghosts with ghostly bugles blow- ing	200

INDEX—Continued

There are some that go for love of a fight.....	96
There is a hill in England.....	60
There's a military band that plays, on Sunday afternoons..	63
There's a rumble an' a jumble an' a humpin' an' a thud,..	26
There used to be a boy next door.....	172
There will be dreams again! The grass will spread.....	171
They dug no grave for our soldier lad, who fought and who died out there:.....	136
They knew they were fighting our war. As the months grew to years	52
They shall not pass, While Britain's sons draw breath....	125
They shall return when the wars are over.....	179
They've put us through our paces;.....	69
This is the song of the Plane—.....	190
Thou art no longer here.....	90
Through the dark night and the fury of battle.....	84
'Tis a green isle set in a silver water.....	180
Trotting the roan horse.....	170
Twenty years of the army, of drawing a sergeant's pay....	38
Unfurl the flag of Freedom.....	98
Up among the chimneys tall.....	49
Was there ever a game we did not share.....	91
We had forgotten You, or very nearly—.....	55
We never were made to be seen on parade.....	66
We often sit upon the porch on sultry August nights.....	59
West to the hills, the long, long trail that strikes.....	123
We whom the draft rejected.....	160
What are we fighting for, men of my race.....	165
When I return, let us be very still.....	33
When the shells are bursting round.....	174
Who was it, picked from civil life.....	127
Why do we love our flag? Ask why flowers love the sun- shine	173
Within this nation-hallowed tomb.....	202
Write us your verse, oh, soldier, tell us the grim, red tale.	193

INDEX—Continued

Yes, back at home I used to drive a tram;.....	97
You're a funny fellow, poilu, in your dinky little cap.....	95
You see that young kid lying there.....	124
"You've heard a good deal of the telephone wires".....	57

Readings and Monologues à la Mode

By WALTER BEN HARE

THIRTY-TWO platform selections in prose and verse, ranging from humor to pathos, and affording an excellent repertoire for the versatile entertainer.

CONTENTS.—Amateur Gum Chewer; American Eagle; Am I Your Wife? At the Soda Fountain; Betty at the Baseball Game; Billy Keeps a Secret; Black Blue-Grass Widow; Bridget's Disappointments; Brudder Rastus' Sermon on the World War; Cullud Lady at the Phone; Free Years Old; Glory Car; Hallowe'en Witch; High School Tact; How to Get Married; Humoresque; Kid's Complaint; Lodge Goat; Men Who Died; Minnie at the Skating Rink; Mrs. Santa Claus; Newlyweds; Practisin'; Sin of Steve Audaine; S-m-i-l-e; Sonny Meets the Smiths; Traumerei; Turkey in the Straw; When I'm All Dressed Up; Willie, the Angelic Child.

Beautiful cloth binding, lettering and design in two colors, attractive type.

Price, $1.25

T. S. Denison & Company, Publishers

623 S. Wabash Ave.

CHICAGO

Heilich

de

Some Vaudeville Monologues

By HARRY L. NEWTON

RIGHT up to the minute and covers a wide range of characters. Thirteen for men and five for women.

CONTENTS.—“People I Have Met”—Cholly has a perfect batting average in the laugh league. “Well, I Swan!”—Reuben’s impressions of a big city. “Her Busted Romances”—a muchly jilted maiden of uncertain age. “Music à la Carte”—Bobby explains the situation without orchestral aid. “Abie Cohen’s Wedding Day”—a ready conversationalist when his hands are free. “Sorrows of Sadie”—a chorus girl confides to a sympathetic companion. “Tipperary Tips”—Barney prescribes a laugh tonic. “Kissing as an Art”—efficiency is his middle name. “Panhandle Pete”—he hands out a piece of free advice. “Tillie Olson’s Romance”—a Swedish queen of the kitchen. “As Tony Tells It”—he has an imported dialect—try it on your vocabulary. “Suffragette Susie”—who might be willing to change her name and pay the parson as well. “A Sad Lover”—elucidations of a colored Romeo. “Chatter”—Nat has a jitney income, a limousine appetite and a six cylinder conversation. “My Father Says”—Elizabeth does a bit of advertising. “I’m a Tellin’ You”—a small town guy distributes some village information. “The Precinct Politician”—as a political speech maker he is a good plumber. “Yon Yonson, Yanitor”—he turns on the steam. Unique illustrations of each character.

Beautiful cloth binding, lettering and design in two colors, attractive type.

Price, $1.25

T. S. Denison & Company, Publishers

623 S. Wabash Ave.

CHICAGO

Let's Pretend

A Book of Children's Plays

By LINDSEY BARBEE

“COME—let's pretend!” has been the slogan of all childhood. A few gay feathers have transformed an everyday lad into a savage warrior; a sweeping train has given a simple gingham frock the dignity of a court robe; the power of make-believe has changed a bare attic into a gloomy forest or perhaps into a royal palace. These six plays will appeal to the imagination, to the fun-loving nature and to the best ideals of all children.

CONTENTS.—The Little Pink Lady (6 Girls); The Ever-Ever Land (16 Boys, 17 Girls); When the Toys Awake (15 Boys, 5 Girls); The Forest of Every Day (5 Boys, 7 Girls); A Christmas Tree Joke (7 Boys, 7 Girls); “If Don't-Believe Is Changed Into Believe” (21 Boys, 15 Girls). Full descriptions for producing; easy to costume and “put on.” Clever illustrations showing the appearance of each character. The most charming children's plays ever written.

Beautiful cloth binding, lettering and design in two colors, attractive type.

Price, $1.25

T. S. Denison & Company, Publishers

623 S. Wabash Ave.

CHICAGO

Jolly Monologues

By MARY MONCURE PARKER

ANOTHER superb group of readings by the author of "Merry Monologues." The twenty-eight original selections in prose and verse will prove gems for any platform artist. Many moods and shades of sentiment are represented, but the majority are humorous. The original work of this author is in increasing demand.

CONTENTS.—At the Bridge Party; A Free Lunch; You Have the Same Old Smile; Signs of Spring; Mr. Daniel and the Lions; At the Telephone; You's Mah Lil' Coal Black Baby; The Ghost of Annie Flanigan; The Club Luncheon; The New Baby; The Kisses of Life; What George Thinks of the Movies; Isn't Art Absorbing; Her Valentine; Maggie McCarty Talks About Receptions; Hiram and the Bolsheviks; Jimmy's Prayer; What Mary Thinks of Boys; From the Street Car Conductor's Point of View; The Eater; The Peach Blossom Princess; One Minute to Eat; A Chop Suey Love Tale; Converting John the "Blaptist"; To Him That Overcometh; When We Went In; Who Says Woman's Place Is at Home? Red Charley—One Credit.

Beautiful cloth binding, lettering and design in two colors, attractive type.

Price, $1.25

T. S. Denison & Company, Publishers

623 S. Wabash Ave.

CHICAGO

Merry Monologues

By MARY MONCURE PARKER

THESE selections are wholly original and sufficiently varied in character and sentiment to enable the reader to make up a well-rounded program in which high comedy mingles with farce and pathos in a manner suitable for all occasions. Nineteen monologues and nine short poems which are especially adapted to that particular form of entertainment called the pianologue, viz., reading to music.

Some of the selections are new but most of them are the pick from the author's wide repertoire, which she has used throughout this country and in England. They bear the stamp of enthusiastic public approval and are now first offered to the public.

Contents: On the Street Car; The Renaissance of the Kiss; Husbands Is Husbands; Oh, Friend of Mine; George's First Sweetheart; Bobby and the New Baby; Lucile Gets Ready for a Dance; Mandy's Man and Safety First; Maggie McCarthy Goes on a Diet; Mrs. Climber Doesn't Like Notoriety; Lucindy Jones Expects a Legacy; Grown Folks Is so Awful Queer; At the Movies; The Gingie Boy; Ode to a Manikin; Isaacstein's Busy Day; Like Pilgrims to the Appointed Place; Mrs. Bargain Counter Meets a Friend; Mother Mine; Maggie McCarthy Has Her Fortune Told; In Vaudeville; Uncle Jim and the Liniment; The Funny Story; In the Milliner Shop; Mrs. Trubble's Troubles; George's Cousin Willie; When Lucindy Goes to Town; A Question.

Beautiful cloth binding, lettering and design in two colors, clear, attractive type.

Price, $1.25

T. S. Denison & Company, Publishers

623 S. Wabash Ave.

CHICAGO

THIS BOOK IS DUE ON THE LAST DATE
STAMPED BELOW

AN INITIAL FINE OF 25 CENTS

WILL BE ASSESSED FOR FAILURE TO RETURN
THIS BOOK ON THE DATE DUE. THE PENALTY
WILL INCREASE TO 50 CENTS ON THE FOURTH
DAY AND TO $1.00 ON THE SEVENTH DAY OVERDUE.

APR 20 1937

LIBRARY USE

APR 20 1940

MAR 20 1963

AUG 11 1940

JUN 10 '64 H

MAR 1 1944

REC'D LD

APR 14 1945

JUN 5 '64-8.AM

15 Mar '49 SL

10 Feb '53 HH

JAN 27 1953 LD

10 Jun '55 DW

MAR 31 1955 LD

YB 11670

542101

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY

